Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sugar Notch Borough's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sugar Notch Borough, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sugar Notch Borough's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sugar Notch Borough filed its original complaint on February 17, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Sugar Notch Borough, Pennsylvania v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45090-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sugar Notch Borough knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Sugar Notch Borough's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sugar Notch Borough's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sugar Notch Borough, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1627. Pell City, Alabama, City of v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45091-DAP: Plaintiff Pell City, Alabama

Pell City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pell City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pell City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pell City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Pell City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pell City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pell City filed its original complaint on February 14, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 4, 2020. See Pell City, Alabama, City of v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45091-DAP, ECF No. 11. Pell City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pell City elected not to do so. Instead, Pell City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pell City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Pell City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Pell City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pell City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Pell City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.10% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pell City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Pell City filed its original complaint on February 14, 2020. See Pell City, Alabama, City of v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45091-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Pell City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Pell City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Pell City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Pell City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Pell City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pell City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pell City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Pell City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Pell City filed its original complaint on February 14, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Pell City, Alabama, City of v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45091-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Pell City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Pell City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Pell City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Pell City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Pell City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on February 14, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pell City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1628. Stevens v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45092-DAP: Plaintiff Susan K. Stevens, administratrix of The Estate of Toria Captri Stevens, North Carolina

Susan K. Stevens, administratrix of The Estate of Toria Captri Stevens’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Stevens failed to provide notice of her proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Stevens also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because her untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Stevens’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Stevens does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to her alleged harm, her RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and she lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Stevens was on notice of her claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Stevens elected not to do so. Instead, Stevens waited four years after her deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Stevens’s lack of diligence in pursuing her claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Stevens filed her original complaint on January 17, 2020. See Stevens v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45092-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Stevens’s delay in seeking to amend her complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Stevens, an individual in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to her injuries. Instead, she relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Stevens's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Stevens filed its original complaint on January 17, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Stevens v. Stevens's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Stevens, an individual in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1629. City of Level Plains, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45100-DAP: Plaintiff Level Plains Town, Alabama

Level Plains Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Level Plains Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Level Plains Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Level Plains Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Level Plains Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Level Plains Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Level Plains Town filed its original complaint on February 25, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 12, 2020. See City of Level Plains, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45100-DAP, ECF No. 18. Level Plains Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Level Plains Town elected not to do so. Instead, Level Plains Town waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Level Plains Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Level Plains Town's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Level Plains Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Level Plains Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.11% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Level Plains Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Level Plains Town filed its original complaint on February 25, 2020. See City of Level Plains, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45100-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Level Plains Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Level Plains Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Level Plains Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Level Plains Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Level Plains Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Level Plains Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Level Plains Town’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Level Plains Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Level Plains Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Level Plains Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Level Plains Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Level Plains Town’s potential claims against them. Level Plains Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Level Plains Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Level Plains Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Level Plains Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Level Plains Town filed its original complaint on February 25, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Level Plains, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45100-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Level Plains Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Level Plains Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Level Plains Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Level Plains Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Level Plains Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on February 25, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Level Plains Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1630. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45104-DAP: Plaintiff Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas, Texas

Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on March 13, 2020. See Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45104-DAP, ECF No. 1. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas elected not to do so. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.28% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas filed its original complaint on March 13, 2020. See Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45104-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Texas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Texas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas, a native tribe in Texas, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas filed its original complaint on March 13, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45104-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas, a native tribe in Texas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1631. Geneva County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P., Case No. 1:20-op-45105-DAP: Plaintiff Geneva County, Alabama

Geneva County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Geneva County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Geneva County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Geneva County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Geneva County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Geneva County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Geneva County filed its original complaint on February 25, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 13, 2020. See Geneva County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P., Case No. 1:20-op-45105-DAP, ECF No. 26. Geneva County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Geneva County elected not to do so. Instead, Geneva County waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Geneva County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Geneva County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Geneva County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Geneva County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Geneva County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.37% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Geneva County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Geneva County filed its original complaint on February 25, 2020. See Geneva County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P., Case No. 1:20-op-45105-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Geneva County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1

(Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Geneva County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Geneva County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Geneva County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Geneva County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Geneva County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Geneva County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Geneva County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Geneva County filed its original complaint on February 25, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Geneva County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P., Case No. 1:20-op-45105-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Geneva County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Geneva County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Geneva County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Geneva County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Geneva County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on February 25, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Geneva County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Geneva County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1632. Leysen v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45107-DAP: Plaintiff Patty Carol Leysen, administrator of The Estate of Brian Keith Johnston, North Carolina

Patty Carol Leysen, administrator of The Estate of Brian Keith Johnston’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Leysen failed to provide notice of her proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Leysen also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because her untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Leysen’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Leysen does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to her alleged harm, her RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and she lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Leysen was on notice of her claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Leysen filed her original complaint on January 17, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 18, 2020. See Leysen v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45107-DAP, ECF No. 19. Leysen could have amended her complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Leysen elected not to do so. Instead, Leysen waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Leysen’s lack of diligence in pursuing her claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing her case years ago, Leysen never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Leysen's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Leysen's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Leysen's delay in seeking to amend her complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Leysen, an individual in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to her injuries. Instead, she relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Leysen's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Leysen filed her original complaint on January 17, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Leysen

v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45107-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. 1633. City of Luverne, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45109-DAP: Plaintiff Luverne City, Alabama

Luverne City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Luverne City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Luverne City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Luverne City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Luverne City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Luverne City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Luverne City filed its original complaint on February 25, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 24, 2020. See City of Luverne, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45109-DAP, ECF No. 19. Luverne City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Luverne City elected not to do so. Instead, Luverne City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Luverne City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Luverne City's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Luverne City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Luverne City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.03% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Luverne City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Luverne City filed its original complaint on February 25, 2020. *See City of Luverne, Alabama v. Luverne City filed its original complaint on February 25, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Luverne, Alabama v. Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Luverne City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Luverne City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on February 25, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Luverne City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1634. Rapides Parish Police Jury v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45111-DAP: Plaintiff Rapides Parish, Louisiana

Rapides Parish's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rapides Parish failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rapides Parish also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rapides Parish's motion should be denied due to futility, as Rapides Parish does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Rapides Parish was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rapides Parish amended its complaint on June 22, 2020, after transfer to the MDL on March 25, 2020. See Rapides Parish Police Jury v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45111-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Rapides Parish declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Rapides Parish's deadline to amend was in 2020. Rapides Parish waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Rapides Parish's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Rapides Parish cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey &

Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Rapides Parish, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Rapides Parish fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Rapides Parish’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Rapides Parish). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rapides Parish to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Rapides Parish’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.18% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rapides Parish to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Rapides Parish filed its original complaint on March 6, 2020. See Rapides Parish Police Jury v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45111-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Rapides Parish never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Rapides Parish's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Rapides Parish's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Rapides Parish's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Rapides Parish therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Louisiana law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Rapides Parish's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Louisiana law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Rapides Parish, a municipality in Louisiana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Rapides Parish seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Rapides Parish Police Jury v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp., et al., No. 1:20-op-45111-DAP; and Phillip Terrell v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp., et al., No. 1:20-op-45123-DAP. Rapides Parish’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Rapides Parish’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Rapides Parish filed its original complaint on March 6, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Rapides Parish Police Jury v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45111-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Rapides Parish knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Rapides Parish’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555));

see Section III.B.4, above. Rapides Parish’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Louisiana, public-nuisance claims are subject to a one-year limitations period. Rapides Parish’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Rapides Parish sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on March 6, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Rapides Parish, a municipality in Louisiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1635. Escambia County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45112-DAP: Plaintiff Escambia County, Alabama

Escambia County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Escambia County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Escambia County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Escambia County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Escambia County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Escambia County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Escambia County filed its original complaint on March 5, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 25, 2020. See Escambia County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45112-DAP, ECF No. 13. Escambia County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Escambia County elected not to do so. Instead, Escambia County waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Escambia County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Escambia County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Escambia County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Escambia County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Decl., Exhibit C (0.21% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Escambia County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Escambia County filed its original complaint on March 5, 2020. See Escambia County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45112-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Escambia County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Escambia County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Escambia County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Escambia County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Escambia County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Escambia County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Escambia County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Escambia County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Escambia County filed its original complaint on March 5, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Escambia County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45112-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Escambia County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Escambia County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Escambia County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Escambia County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Escambia County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1636. City of Chickasaw, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45115-DAP: Plaintiff Chickasaw City, Alabama

Chickasaw City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chickasaw City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chickasaw City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chickasaw City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Chickasaw City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chickasaw City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Chickasaw City filed its original complaint on February 28, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 26, 2020. See City of Chickasaw, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case

No. 1:20-op-45115-DAP, ECF No. 8. Chickasaw City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Chickasaw City elected not to do so. Instead, Chickasaw City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Chickasaw City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Chickasaw City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Chickasaw City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chickasaw City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Chickasaw City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.17% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chickasaw City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Chickasaw City filed its original complaint on February 28, 2020. See City of Chickasaw, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45115-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Chickasaw City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Chickasaw City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Chickasaw City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Chickasaw City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Chickasaw City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Chickasaw City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Chickasaw City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Chickasaw City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Chickasaw City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Chickasaw City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Chickasaw City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Chickasaw City’s potential claims against them. Chickasaw City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Chickasaw City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Chickasaw City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Chickasaw City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Chickasaw City filed its original complaint on February 28, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Chickasaw, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45115-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Chickasaw City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Chickasaw City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Chickasaw City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Chickasaw City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Chickasaw City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on February 28, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chickasaw City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1637. City of Satsuma, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45116-DAP: Plaintiff Satsuma City, Alabama

Satsuma City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Satsuma City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Satsuma City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Satsuma City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Satsuma City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Satsuma City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Satsuma City filed its original complaint on March 3, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 26, 2020. See City of Satsuma, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45116-DAP, ECF No. 9. Satsuma City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Satsuma City elected not to do so. Instead, Satsuma City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Satsuma City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Satsuma City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.004% market share for Satsuma City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Satsuma City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Satsuma City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl.,

Exhibit C (0.17% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Satsuma City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Satsuma City filed its original complaint on March 3, 2020. *See City of Satsuma, Alabama v. The PBMs notified Satsuma City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Satsuma City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Satsuma City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Satsuma City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Satsuma City's potential claims against them. Satsuma City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

1638. City of Uniontown, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45117-DAP: Plaintiff Uniontown Town, Alabama

Uniontown Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Uniontown Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Uniontown Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Uniontown Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Uniontown Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Linden City elected not to do so. Instead, Linden City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Linden City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Linden City’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Linden City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Linden City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.01% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Linden City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Linden City filed its original complaint on March 3, 2020. See City of Linden, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45118-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Linden City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Linden City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Linden City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Linden City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Linden City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Linden City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Linden City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Linden City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Linden City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Linden City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Linden City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Linden City's potential claims against them. Linden City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Linden City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Linden City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Linden City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Linden City filed its original complaint on March 3, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Linden, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45118-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Linden City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Linden City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Linden City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Linden City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Linden City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on March 3, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Linden City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1640. Town of Dauphin Island, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45119-DAP: Plaintiff Dauphin Island Town, Alabama

Dauphin Island Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dauphin Island Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dauphin Island Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dauphin Island Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Dauphin Island Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dauphin Island Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Dauphin Island Town filed its original complaint on March 5, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 27, 2020. See Town of Dauphin Island, Alabama v. Purdue

Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45119-DAP, ECF No. 11. Dauphin Island Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Dauphin Island Town elected not to do so. Instead, Dauphin Island Town waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Dauphin Island Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Dauphin Island Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

1641. Town of Sweet Water, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45120-DAP: Plaintiff Sweet Water Town, Alabama

Sweet Water Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sweet Water Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sweet Water Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sweet Water Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sweet Water Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1642. City of Kirkland v. Endo Health Solutions Inc et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45121-DAP: Plaintiff Kirkland City, Washington

Kirkland City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kirkland City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kirkland City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kirkland City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Kirkland City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Kirkland City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Kirkland City amended its complaint on December 4, 2020, after transfer to the MDL on March 27, 2020. See City of Kirkland v. Endo Health Solutions Inc et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45121-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Kirkland City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Kirkland City's deadline to amend was in 2020. Kirkland City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Kirkland City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Kirkland City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Kirkland City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kirkland City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Kirkland City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.35% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kirkland City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Kirkland City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Kirkland City, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Kirkland City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Kirkland City filed its original complaint on March 11, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Kirkland v. Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Kirkland City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Kirkland City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on March 11, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Kirkland City, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1643. Town of Faunsdale, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45122-DAP: Plaintiff Faunsdale Town, Alabama

Faunsdale Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Faunsdale Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Faunsdale Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Faunsdale Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Faunsdale Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Faunsdale Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Faunsdale Town filed its original complaint on March 9, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 27, 2020. See Town of Faunsdale, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45122-DAP, ECF No. 8. Faunsdale Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Faunsdale Town elected not to do so. Instead, Faunsdale Town waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Faunsdale Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Faunsdale Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Faunsdale Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Faunsdale Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Faunsdale Town filed its original complaint on March 9, 2020. See Town of Faunsdale, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45122-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Faunsdale Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Faunsdale Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Faunsdale Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Faunsdale Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Faunsdale Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Faunsdale Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Faunsdale Town’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Faunsdale Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Faunsdale Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Faunsdale Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Faunsdale Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Faunsdale Town’s potential claims against them. Faunsdale Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Faunsdale Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Faunsdale Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Faunsdale Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Faunsdale Town filed its original complaint on March 9, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Faunsdale, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45122-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Faunsdale Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Faunsdale Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Faunsdale Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Faunsdale Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Faunsdale Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on March 9, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Faunsdale Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1644. Phillip Terrell v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45123-DAP: Plaintiff District Attorney of Rapides Parish, Louisiana

District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. District Attorney of Rapides Parish failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. District Attorney of Rapides Parish also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s motion should be denied due to futility, as District Attorney of Rapides Parish does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. District Attorney of Rapides Parish was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, District Attorney of Rapides Parish amended its complaint on June 22, 2020, after transfer to the MDL on March 27, 2020. See Phillip Terrell v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45123-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, District Attorney of Rapides Parish declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s deadline to amend was in 2020.

District Attorney of Rapides Parish waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. District Attorney of Rapides Parish's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. District Attorney of Rapides Parish cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. District Attorney of Rapides Parish, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. District Attorney of Rapides Parish fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint"); Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to District Attorney of Rapides Parish's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for District Attorney of Rapides Parish). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for District Attorney of Rapides Parish to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to District Attorney of Rapides Parish's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.18% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for District Attorney of Rapides Parish to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. District Attorney of Rapides Parish filed its original complaint on March 13, 2020. See Phillip Terrell v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45123-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, District Attorney of Rapides Parish never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating District Attorney of Rapides Parish's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of District Attorney of Rapides Parish's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by District Attorney of Rapides Parish's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and District Attorney of Rapides Parish therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, District Attorney of Rapides Parish failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified District Attorney of Rapides Parish of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but District Attorney of Rapides Parish refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s potential claims against them. District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Louisiana law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Louisiana law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. District Attorney of Rapides Parish, a municipality in Louisiana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. District Attorney of Rapides Parish seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Rapides Parish Police Jury v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp., et al., No. 1:20-op-45111-DAP; and Phillip Terrell v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp., et al., No. 1:20-op-45123-DAP. District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. District Attorney of Rapides Parish filed its original complaint on March 13, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Phillip Terrell v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corp et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45123-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that District Attorney of Rapides Parish knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Louisiana, public-nuisance claims are subject to a one-year limitations period. District Attorney of Rapides Parish’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because District Attorney of Rapides Parish sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on March 13, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. District Attorney of Rapides Parish, a municipality in Louisiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1645. King and Queen County, VA v. Mallinckrodt, PLC, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45138-DAP: Plaintiff King and Queen County, Virginia

King and Queen County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. King and Queen County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. King and Queen County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, King and Queen County's motion should be denied due to futility, as King and Queen County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. King and Queen County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on January 3, 2020. See King and Queen County, VA v. Mallinckrodt, PLC, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45138-DAP, ECF No. 1-2 (bringing claims against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company; ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.; Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx Inc.). King and Queen County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against other PBM-related entities in 2020, but elected not to do so. See Section II.A.1, above. Now, King and Queen County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants four years ago. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of King and Queen County's complaint, King and Queen County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its original complaint against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A, above. King and Queen County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. King and Queen County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. King and Queen County filed its original complaint on January 3, 2020, but waited until August 8, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—four and a half years later. See King and Queen County, VA v. Mallinckrodt, PLC, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45138-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 8, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating King and Queen County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of King and Queen County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by King and Queen County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and King and Queen County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, King and Queen County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to King and Queen County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified King and Queen County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but King and Queen County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, King and Queen County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. King and Queen County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against King and Queen County’s potential claims against them. King and Queen County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But King and Queen County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. King and Queen County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for King and Queen County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. King and Queen County filed its original complaint on January 3, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See King and Queen County, VA v. Mallinckrodt, PLC, et al., Case

No. 1:20-op-45138-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that King and Queen County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on January 3, 2024. King and Queen County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. King and Queen County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. King and Queen County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1646. Adams County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45140-DAP: Plaintiff Adams County, Pennsylvania

Adams County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Adams County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Adams County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Adams County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Adams County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Adams County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Adams County filed its original complaint on August 6, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 1, 2020. See Adams County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45140-DAP, ECF No. 23. Adams County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Adams County elected not to do so. Instead, Adams County waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Adams County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Adams County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Adams County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Adams County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Adams County filed its original complaint on August 6, 2019. See Adams County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45140-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; 1-3; 1-4; 1-5. Despite filing its case years ago, Adams County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Adams County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Adams County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Adams County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Adams County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court's repeated instructions to the contrary, Adams County has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Adams County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Adams County's failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Adams County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Adams County, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Adams County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Adams County filed its original complaint on August 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Adams County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45140-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; 1-3; 1-4; 1-5. Even assuming arguendo that Adams County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on August 6, 2023. Adams County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Adams County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Adams County, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1647. City of Fullerton et al. v. Cephalon Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45143-DAP: Plaintiff Fullerton City, California

Fullerton City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fullerton City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fullerton City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fullerton City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Fullerton City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fullerton City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Fullerton City filed its original complaint on October 24, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 2, 2020. See City of Fullerton et al. v. Cephalon Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 42. Fullerton City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Fullerton City elected not to do so. Instead, Fullerton City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Fullerton City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Fullerton City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.44% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Fullerton City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Fullerton City filed its original complaint on October 24, 2019, but waited until February 26, 2020 to implement a litigation hold. See City of Fullerton et al. v. Cephalon Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1-3; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: February 26, 2020). Fullerton City's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Fullerton City, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Fullerton City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Fullerton City filed its original complaint on October 24, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Fullerton et al. v. Cephalon Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Fullerton City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on October 24, 2023. Fullerton City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Fullerton City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Fullerton City, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1648. Northampton County, VA v. Mallinckrodt, PLC, Case No. 1:20-op-45144-DAP: Plaintiff Northampton County, Virginia

Northampton County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Northampton County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Northampton County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Northampton County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Northampton County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Northampton County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on January 3, 2020. See Northampton County, VA v. Mallinckrodt, PLC, Case No. 1:20-op-45144-DAP, ECF No. 1-2 (bringing claims against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company; ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.; Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx Inc.). Northampton County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against other PBM-related entities in 2020, but elected not to do so. See Section II.A.1, above. Now, Northampton County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants four years ago. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Northampton County's complaint, Northampton County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its original complaint against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A, above. Northampton County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Northampton County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Northampton County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Northampton County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Northampton County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.31% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Northampton County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Northampton County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Northampton County filed its original complaint on January 3, 2020, but waited until August 13, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—four and a half years later. See Northampton County, VA v. Mallinckrodt, PLC, Case No. 1:20-op-45144-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 13, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Northampton County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Northampton County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Northampton County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Northampton County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Northampton County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Northampton County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Northampton County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Northampton County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Northampton County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Northampton County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Northampton County’s potential claims against them. Northampton County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Northampton County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Northampton County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Northampton County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Northampton County filed its original complaint on January 3, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Northampton County, VA v. Mallinckrodt, PLC, Case No. 1:20-op-45144-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Northampton County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on January 3, 2024. Northampton County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Northampton County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Northampton County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1649. Isle of Wight County v. Mallinckrodt, PLC, Case No. 1:20-op-45145-DAP: Plaintiff Isle of Wight County, Virginia

Isle of Wight County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Isle of Wight County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Isle of Wight County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Isle of Wight County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Isle of Wight County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Isle of Wight County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on January 3, 2020. *See Isle of Wight County v. (0.10% market share for Isle of Wight County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Isle of Wight County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Isle of Wight County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. 1650. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45148-DAP: Plaintiff IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust, Texas

IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust's motion should be denied due to futility, as IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on April 7, 2020. See IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45148-DAP, ECF No. 1. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust elected not to do so. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust filed its original complaint on April 7, 2020. See IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45148-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and IBEW

Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Texas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Texas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust, a third party payor in Texas, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust filed its original complaint on April 7, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45148-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. IBEW Local 716 Electrical Medical Trust, a third party payor in Texas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1651. The People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45154-DAP: Plaintiff Sangamon County, Illinois

Sangamon County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sangamon County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sangamon County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sangamon County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sangamon County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sangamon County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sangamon County amended its complaint on July 15, 2020, after transfer to the MDL on April 15, 2020. See The People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45154-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sangamon County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sangamon County’s deadline to amend was in 2020. Sangamon County waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sangamon County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Sangamon County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Sangamon County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Sangamon County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint"); Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sangamon County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See

Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Sangamon County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sangamon County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Sangamon County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.16% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sangamon County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Sangamon County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Sangamon County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Sangamon County began receiving those services on January 2, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Sangamon County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Sangamon County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Sangamon County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sangamon County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sangamon County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sangamon County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sangamon County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Sangamon County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sangamon County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Sangamon County’s potential claims against them. Sangamon County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sangamon County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sangamon County, a municipality in Illinois, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sangamon County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sangamon County filed its original complaint on February 27, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See The People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45154-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sangamon County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Sangamon County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sangamon County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sangamon County, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1652. Perry County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45158-DAP: Plaintiff Perry County, Alabama

Perry County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Perry County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Perry County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Perry County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Perry County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Perry County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Perry County filed its original complaint on February 27, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 21, 2020. See Perry County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45158-DAP, ECF No. 5. Perry County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Perry County elected not to do so. Instead, Perry County waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Perry County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Perry County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Perry County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Perry County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Perry County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.29% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Perry County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Perry County filed its original complaint on February 27, 2020. See Perry County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45158-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Perry County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Perry County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Perry County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Perry County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Perry County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Perry County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Perry County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Perry County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Perry County filed its original complaint on February 27, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Perry County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45158-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Perry County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Perry County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Perry County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Perry County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Perry County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on February 27, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Perry County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Perry County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1653. City of Buena Vista, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45159-DAP: Plaintiff Buena Vista City, Virginia

Buena Vista City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Buena Vista City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Buena Vista City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Buena Vista City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Buena Vista City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Buena Vista City previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on January 3, 2020. See City of Buena Vista, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45159-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; 1-3 (bringing claims against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company; ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.; Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx Inc.). Buena Vista City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against other PBM-related entities in 2020, but elected not to do so. See Section II.A.1, above. Now, Buena Vista City seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants four years ago. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Buena Vista City's complaint, Buena Vista City already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its original complaint against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A, above. Buena Vista City was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Buena Vista City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.21% market share for Buena Vista City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Buena Vista City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Buena Vista City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Buena Vista City filed its original complaint on January 3, 2020, but waited until August 5, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over four and a half years later. See City of Buena Vista, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45159-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; 1-3; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 5, 2024).

This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Buena Vista City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Buena Vista City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Buena Vista City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Buena Vista City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Buena Vista City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Buena Vista City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Buena Vista City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Buena Vista City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Buena Vista City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Buena Vista City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Buena Vista City’s potential claims against them. Buena Vista City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Buena Vista City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Buena Vista City, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Buena Vista City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Buena Vista City filed its original complaint on January 3, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Buena Vista, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45159-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Buena Vista City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on January 3, 2024. Buena Vista City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Buena Vista City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Buena Vista City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1654. Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut v. Endo Health Solutions Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45164-DAP: Plaintiff Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut, Connecticut

Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut's motion should be denied due to futility, as Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut filed its original complaint on May 12, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Mohegan Tribe of Indians of Connecticut v. 1655. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians v. Endo Health Solutions, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45165-DAP: Plaintiff Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians, Nevada

Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians's motion should be denied due to futility, as Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on May 15, 2020. *See Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians v. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians elected not to do so. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians' lack of

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.09% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians filed its original complaint on May 15, 2020. See Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians v. Endo Health Solutions, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45165-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians’ case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians’ document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone

Indians' disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Nevada law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Nevada law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians, a native tribe in Nevada, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians filed its original complaint on May 15, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians v. Endo Health Solutions, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45165-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Elko Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians, a native tribe in Nevada, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1656. Stone County, Mississippi v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45168-DAP: Plaintiff Stone County, Mississippi

Stone County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. The Court previously dismissed Stone County's case. Moreover, Stone County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Stone County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Stone County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Stone County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Jurisdiction. This Court previously dismissed Stone County's case on February 23, 2023. See Stone County, Mississippi v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45168-DAP, ECF No. 4. "Following entry of final judgment, a party may not seek to amend their complaint without first moving to alter, set aside or vacate judgment pursuant to either Rule 59 or Rule 60 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.” In re Ferro Corp., 511 F.3d at 624 (citation omitted). Without such post-judgment relief, the “district court lacks power to grant a motion to amend the complaint” because there is no “live case or controversy before the district court.” Id. (quoting Acevedo-Villalobos, 22 F.3d at 389). Stone County has neither moved for post-judgment relief nor met the heightened requirements for reopening a case. See Leisure Caviar, 616 F.3d at 617 (“A claimant who seeks to amend a complaint after losing the case must provide a compelling explanation to the district court for granting the motion.”). Stone County has not offered any basis to reopen its case, so its motion for leave to amend must be denied. See id. (affirming denial of leave to amend after judgment, in part, because the plaintiff was previously on notice of the alleged “newly discovered evidence” offered in support of the motion).

Lack of Diligence. Stone County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Stone County filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 2, 2020. See Stone County, Mississippi v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45168-DAP, ECF No. 1. Stone County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Stone County elected not to do so. Stone County waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Stone County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Stone County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Stone County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Stone County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Stone County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.23% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Stone County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Stone County filed its original complaint on June 2, 2020. See Stone County, Mississippi v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45168-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Stone County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Stone County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Stone County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Stone County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Stone County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Stone County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Stone County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Stone County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Stone County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, et al., No. 1:18-op-45775-DAP; and Stone County, Mississippi v. McKesson Corporation, et al., No. 1:20-op-45168-DAP. Stone County’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Stone County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Stone County filed its original complaint on June 2, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Stone County, Mississippi v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45168-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Stone County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Stone County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Stone County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Stone County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1657. Seeley v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45169-DAP: Plaintiff Christopher Seeley, as temporary administrator of the Estate of Jennifer Kaczor, deceased, and as guardian of Jocelyn Kaczor, New York

Seeley's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Seeley failed to provide notice of his proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Seeley also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because his untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover,

Seeley's motion should be denied due to futility, as Seeley does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to his alleged harm, his RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and he lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Seeley was on notice of his claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Seeley filed his original complaint directly into the MDL on June 5, 2020. See Seeley v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45169-DAP, ECF No. 1. Seeley could have amended his complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Seeley elected not to do so. Seeley waited four years after his deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Seeley's lack of diligence in pursuing his claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Seeley filed his original complaint on June 5, 2020. See Seeley v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45169-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing his case years ago, Seeley never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Seeley's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Seeley's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Seeley's disregard for his most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Seeley therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend his complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Seeley’s delay in seeking to amend his complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Seeley, an individual in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to his injuries. Instead, he relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Seeley’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Seeley filed his original complaint on June 5, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which he now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Seeley v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45169-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Seeley first learned of his injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on June 5, 2024. Seeley’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Seeley’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Seeley, an individual in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because he is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Seeley's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1658. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45170-DAP: Plaintiff Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah), Massachusetts

Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)'s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)'s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 5, 2020. See Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)

v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45170-DAP, ECF No. 1. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) elected not to do so. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) filed its original complaint on June 5, 2020. See Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45170-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)'s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)'s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah), a native tribe in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)'s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) filed its original complaint on June 5, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45170-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah)’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah) sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on June 5, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wampanoag Tribe of Gay Head (Aquinnah), a native tribe in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1659. Henrico County, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45172-DAP: Plaintiff Henrico County, Virginia

Henrico County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Henrico County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Henrico County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Henrico County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Henrico County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Henrico County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on January 23, 2020. See Henrico County, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45172-DAP, ECF No. 1-2 (bringing claims against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company; ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.; Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx Inc.). Henrico County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against other PBM-related entities in 2020, but elected not to do so. See Section II.A.1, above. Now, Henrico County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants nearly four years ago. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Henrico County's complaint, Henrico County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its original complaint against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A, above. Henrico County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Henrico County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.26% market share for Henrico County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Henrico County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Henrico County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.28% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Henrico County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Henrico County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Henrico County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Henrico County began receiving those services on January 1, 2018. See id. Inasmuch as Henrico County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Henrico County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than six years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Henrico County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Henrico County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Henrico County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Henrico County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Henrico County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Henrico County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Henrico County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Henrico County’s potential claims against them. Henrico County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Henrico County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Henrico County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Henrico County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Henrico County filed its original complaint on January 23, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Henrico County, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45172-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Henrico County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on January 23, 2024. Henrico County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Henrico County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Henrico County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1660. Chesterfield County, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45173-DAP: Plaintiff Chesterfield County, Virginia

Chesterfield County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chesterfield County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chesterfield County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chesterfield County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Chesterfield County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chesterfield County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on January 8, 2020. See Chesterfield County, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45173-DAP, ECF No. 1-2 (bringing claims against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company; ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.; Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx Inc.). Chesterfield County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against other PBM-related entities in 2020, but elected not to do so. See Section II.A.1, above. Now, Chesterfield County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants nearly four years ago. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Chesterfield County's complaint, Chesterfield County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its original complaint against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A, above. Chesterfield County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Chesterfield County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.12% market share for Chesterfield County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chesterfield County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Chesterfield County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Chesterfield County filed its original complaint on January 8, 2020, but waited until July 11, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over five years later. See Chesterfield County, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45173-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 11, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Chesterfield County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Chesterfield County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Chesterfield County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Chesterfield County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Chesterfield County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Chesterfield County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Chesterfield County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Chesterfield County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Chesterfield County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above.

1661. Mecklenburg County, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45174-DAP: Plaintiff Mecklenburg County, Virginia

Mecklenburg County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mecklenburg County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mecklenburg County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mecklenburg County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Mecklenburg County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Mecklenburg County amended its complaint on in state court on October 15, 2019, to add claims against other PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 1-2, 1-3 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Mecklenburg County could have amended its complaint again, without leave, to add claims against other PBM-related entities in 2020, but elected not to do so. See Section II.A.1, above. 1663. City of Winchester, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45176-DAP: Plaintiff Winchester City, Virginia

Winchester City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Winchester City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Winchester City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Winchester City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Winchester City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Winchester City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Winchester City's potential claims against them. Winchester City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Winchester City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Winchester City, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Winchester City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Winchester City filed its original complaint on February 12, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Winchester, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45176-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Winchester City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on February 12, 2024. Winchester City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Winchester City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Winchester City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1664. City of Fairfax, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45177-DAP: Plaintiff Fairfax City, Virginia

Fairfax City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fairfax City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fairfax City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fairfax City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Fairfax City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fairfax City previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on January 3, 2020. See City of Fairfax, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45177-DAP, ECF No. 1-2 (bringing claims against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company; ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.; Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx Inc.). Fairfax City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against other PBM-related entities in 2020, but elected not to do so. See Section II.A.1, above. Now, Fairfax City seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants nearly four years ago. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Fairfax City's complaint, Fairfax City already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its original complaint against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A, above. Fairfax City was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Fairfax City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Fairfax City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Fairfax City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Fairfax City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Fairfax City filed its original complaint on January 3, 2020, but waited until July 26, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over four and a half years later. See City of Fairfax, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45177-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 26, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Fairfax City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Fairfax City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Fairfax City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Fairfax City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Fairfax City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Fairfax City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Fairfax City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Fairfax City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Fairfax City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Fairfax City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Fairfax City’s potential claims against them. Fairfax City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

1665. Stafford County, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45178-DAP: Plaintiff Stafford County, Virginia

Stafford County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Stafford County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Stafford County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Stafford County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Stafford County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

(0.06% market share for Stafford County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Stafford County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Stafford County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.33% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Stafford County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Stafford County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Stafford County filed its original complaint on January 3, 2020, but waited until July 17, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over four and a half years later. See Stafford County, VA v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45178-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 17, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Stafford County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1666. Bedford County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45184-DAP: Plaintiff Bedford County, Pennsylvania

Bedford County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bedford County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bedford County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bedford County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bedford County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bedford County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bedford County filed its original complaint on February 11, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on June 15, 2020. See Bedford County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45184-DAP, ECF No. 13. Bedford County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bedford County elected not to do so. Instead, Bedford County waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bedford County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Bedford County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Bedford County filed its original complaint on February 11, 2020. See Bedford County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45184-DAP, ECF No. 1, 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Bedford County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Bedford County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Bedford County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Bedford County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Bedford County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bedford County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bedford County, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Bedford County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bedford County, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1667. City of Chico et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45189-DAP: Plaintiff Chico City, California

Chico City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chico City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chico City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chico City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Chico City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chico City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Chico City amended its complaint on September 23, 2020, after transfer to the MDL on June 25, 2020. See City of Chico et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45189-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Chico City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Chico City’s deadline to amend was in 2020. Chico City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Chico City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Chico City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Chico City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Chico City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Chico City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl.

(0.10% market share for Chico City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chico City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Chico City, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Chico City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Chico City filed its original complaint on April 29, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Chico et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45189-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Chico City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Chico City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Chico City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chico City, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1668. Hinds County, Mississippi v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc., et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45190-DAP: Plaintiff Hinds County, Mississippi

Hinds County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hinds County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hinds County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hinds County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Hinds County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hinds County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hinds County filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 24, 2020. See Hinds County, Mississippi v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc., et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45190-DAP, ECF No. 1. Hinds County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hinds County elected not to do so. Hinds County waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hinds County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Hinds County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson

Decl. (0.03% market share for Hinds County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Hinds County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Hinds County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.17% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Hinds County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hinds County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Hinds County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hinds County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hinds County filed its original complaint on June 24, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See

Hinds County, Mississippi v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc., et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45190-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Hinds County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Hinds County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Hinds County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hinds County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1669. City of West Frankfort, Illinois v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45191-DAP: Plaintiff West Frankfort City, Illinois

West Frankfort City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. West Frankfort City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. West Frankfort City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, West Frankfort City's motion should be denied due to futility, as West Frankfort City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. West Frankfort City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, West Frankfort City amended its complaint on September 18, 2020, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of West Frankfort, Illinois v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45191-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, West Frankfort City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. West Frankfort City’s deadline to amend was in 2020. West Frankfort City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. West Frankfort City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. West Frankfort City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. West Frankfort City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. West Frankfort City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to West Frankfort City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for West Frankfort City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for West Frankfort City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to West Frankfort City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.29% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for West Frankfort City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But West Frankfort City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. 1670. City of Herrin, Illinois v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45192-DAP: Plaintiff Herrin City, Illinois

Herrin City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Herrin City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Herrin City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Herrin City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Herrin City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

(0.05% market share for Herrin City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Herrin City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Herrin City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.12% market share). 1671. People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45194-DAP: Plaintiff Franklin County, Illinois

Franklin County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Franklin County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Franklin County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Franklin County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Franklin County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Franklin County waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Franklin County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Franklin County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.14% market share for Franklin County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Franklin County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Franklin County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.49% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Franklin County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

But Franklin County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd. et al.*, Case No. 1:20-op-45194-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Franklin County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Franklin County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Franklin County, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1672. City of Madison, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45198-DAP: Plaintiff Madison City, Alabama

Madison City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Madison City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Madison City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Madison City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Madison City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Madison City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Madison City filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on July 15, 2020. See City of Madison, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45198-DAP, ECF No. 1. Madison City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Madison City elected not to do so. Madison City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Madison City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Madison City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Madison City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Madison City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Madison City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.46% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Madison City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Madison City filed its original complaint on July 15, 2020. See City of Madison, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45198-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Madison City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Madison City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Madison City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Madison City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Madison City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Madison City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Madison City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Madison City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Madison City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Madison City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Madison City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Madison City's potential claims against them. Madison City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Madison City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Madison City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Madison City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Madison City filed its original complaint on July 15, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Madison, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45198-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Madison City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Madison City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Madison City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Madison City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Madison City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on July 15, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Madison City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1673. City of Maryville, Tennessee et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45199-DAP: Plaintiff Decatur Town, Tennessee

Decatur Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Decatur Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Decatur Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Decatur Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Decatur Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Decatur Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Decatur Town filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on July 15, 2020. See City of Maryville, Tennessee et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45199-DAP, ECF No. 1. Decatur Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Decatur Town elected not to do so. Decatur Town waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Decatur Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Decatur Town's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Decatur Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Decatur Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Decatur Town filed its original complaint on July 15, 2020. See City of Maryville, Tennessee et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45199-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Decatur Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Decatur Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Decatur Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Decatur Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Decatur Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Decatur Town has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Decatur Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Decatur Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6

(denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Tennessee law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Decatur Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Tennessee law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Decatur Town, a municipality in Tennessee, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Decatur Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Decatur Town filed its original complaint on July 15, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Maryville, Tennessee et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45199-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Decatur Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Decatur Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Decatur Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Decatur Town, a municipality in Tennessee, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1674. City of Maryville, Tennessee et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45199-DAP: Plaintiff Germantown City, Tennessee

Germantown City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Germantown City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Germantown City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Germantown City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Germantown City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Germantown City elected not to do so. (0.02% market share for Germantown City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Germantown City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Germantown City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.20% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Germantown City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Germantown City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Germantown City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Germantown City began receiving those services on April 2, 2009. See id. Inasmuch as Germantown City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl.

¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Germantown City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Germantown City’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Germantown City filed its original complaint on July 15, 2020. See City of Maryville, Tennessee et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45199-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Germantown City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Germantown City has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Germantown City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Germantown City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Germantown City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Germantown City, a municipality in Tennessee, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1677. City of Maryville, Tennessee et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45199-DAP: Plaintiff Ripley City, Tennessee

Ripley City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ripley City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ripley City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ripley City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Ripley City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ripley City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ripley City filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on July 15, 2020. See City of Maryville, Tennessee et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45199-DAP, ECF No. 1. Ripley City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ripley City elected not to do so. Ripley City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ripley City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Ripley City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Ripley City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ripley City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Ripley City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ripley City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Ripley City filed its original complaint on July 15, 2020. See City of Maryville, Tennessee et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45199-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Ripley City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Ripley City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Ripley City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Ripley City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Ripley City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Ripley City has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Ripley City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Ripley City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Tennessee law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Ripley City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Tennessee law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Ripley City, a municipality in Tennessee, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Ripley City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Ripley City filed its original complaint on July 15, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Maryville, Tennessee et al. v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD, et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45199-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Ripley City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Ripley City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Ripley City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ripley City, a municipality in Tennessee, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1678. DeKalb County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45209-DAP: Plaintiff DeKalb County, Alabama

DeKalb County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. DeKalb County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. DeKalb County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, DeKalb County's motion should be denied due to futility, as DeKalb County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. DeKalb County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, DeKalb County filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on July 24, 2020. See DeKalb County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45209-

DAP, ECF No. 1. DeKalb County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, DeKalb County elected not to do so. DeKalb County waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. DeKalb County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to DeKalb County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for DeKalb County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for DeKalb County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to DeKalb County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.30% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for DeKalb County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. DeKalb County filed its original complaint on July 24, 2020. See DeKalb County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45209-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, DeKalb County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating DeKalb County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of DeKalb County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by DeKalb County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and DeKalb County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, DeKalb County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to DeKalb County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified DeKalb County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but DeKalb County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, DeKalb County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. DeKalb County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against DeKalb County’s potential claims against them. DeKalb County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But DeKalb County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. DeKalb County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for DeKalb County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. DeKalb County filed its original complaint on July 24, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See DeKalb County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45209-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that DeKalb County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. DeKalb County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. DeKalb County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. DeKalb County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because DeKalb County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on July 24, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. DeKalb County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. DeKalb County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1679. DeKalb County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45209-DAP: Plaintiff Powell Town, Alabama

Powell Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Powell Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Powell Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Powell Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Powell Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Powell Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Powell Town filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on July 24, 2020. See DeKalb County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45209-DAP, ECF No. 1. Powell Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Powell Town elected not to do so. Powell Town waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Powell Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Powell Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Powell Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Exhibit C (0.38% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Powell Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Powell Town filed its original complaint on July 24, 2020. See DeKalb County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45209-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Powell Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Powell Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Powell Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Powell Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Powell Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Powell Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Powell Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Powell Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Powell Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Powell Town's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Powell Town's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Powell Town's potential claims against them. Powell Town's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Powell Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Powell Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Powell Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Powell Town filed its original complaint on July 24, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See DeKalb County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45209-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Powell Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Powell Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Powell Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Powell Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Powell Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on July 24, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Powell Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1680. City of Oneonta, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45210-DAP: Plaintiff Oneonta City, Alabama

Oneonta City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Oneonta City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Oneonta City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Oneonta City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Oneonta City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Oneonta City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Oneonta City filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on July 24, 2020. *See City of Oneonta, Alabama v. Oneonta City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Oneonta City elected not to do so. Oneonta City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Oneonta City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Oneonta City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Oneonta City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Oneonta City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Oneonta City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.12% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Oneonta City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Oneonta City filed its original complaint on July 24, 2020. See City of Oneonta, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45210-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Oneonta City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Oneonta City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Oneonta City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Oneonta City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Oneonta City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Oneonta City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Oneonta City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Oneonta City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Oneonta City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Oneonta City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Oneonta City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Oneonta City's potential claims against them. Oneonta City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Oneonta City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Oneonta City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Oneonta City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Oneonta City filed its original complaint on July 24, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Oneonta, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45210-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Oneonta City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Oneonta City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Oneonta City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Oneonta City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1681. City of Marion, Illinois v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45215-DAP: Plaintiff Marion City, Illinois

Marion City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Marion City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Marion City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Marion City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Marion City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Marion City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Marion City amended its complaint on October 26, 2020, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Marion, Illinois v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45215-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Marion City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Marion City's deadline to amend was in 2020. Marion City waited almost four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Marion City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Marion City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Marion City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Marion City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Marion City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Marion City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Marion City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Marion City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.16% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Marion City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Marion City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Marion City, a municipality in Illinois, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Marion City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Marion City filed its original complaint on July 28, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Marion, Illinois v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45215-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Marion City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Marion City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Marion City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Marion City, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1682. Town of Dandridge, Tennessee v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45216-DAP: Plaintiff Dandridge Town, Tennessee

Dandridge Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dandridge Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dandridge Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dandridge Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Dandridge Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dandridge Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Dandridge Town filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on July 29, 2020. See Town of Dandridge, Tennessee v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45216-DAP, ECF No. 1. Dandridge Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Dandridge Town elected not to do so. Dandridge Town waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Dandridge Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Dandridge Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.14% market share for Dandridge Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Dandridge Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Dandridge Town filed its original complaint on July 29, 2020. See Town of Dandridge, Tennessee v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45216-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Dandridge Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Dandridge Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Dandridge Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Dandridge Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Dandridge Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Dandridge Town has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Dandridge Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Dandridge Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF

No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Tennessee law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Dandridge Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Tennessee law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Dandridge Town, a municipality in Tennessee, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Dandridge Town, a municipality in Tennessee, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1683. Town of Cleveland, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45217-DAP: Plaintiff Cleveland Town, Alabama

Cleveland Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cleveland Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cleveland Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cleveland Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Cleveland Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cleveland Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cleveland Town filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on July 29, 2020. See Town of Cleveland, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45217-DAP, ECF No. 1. Cleveland Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cleveland Town elected not to do so. Cleveland Town waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cleveland Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Cleveland Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Cleveland Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Cleveland Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.33% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cleveland Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Cleveland Town filed its original complaint on July 29, 2020. See Town of Cleveland, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45217-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Cleveland Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Cleveland Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Cleveland Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Cleveland Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Cleveland Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Cleveland Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Cleveland Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Cleveland Town’s potential claims against them. Cleveland Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Cleveland Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Cleveland Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Cleveland Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Cleveland Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on July 29, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Cleveland Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1684. Town of Cleveland, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45217-DAP: Plaintiff Gurley Town, Alabama

Gurley Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Gurley Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Gurley Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Gurley Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Gurley Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Gurley Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Gurley Town elected not to do so. Gurley Town waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Gurley Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Gurley Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Gurley Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Gurley Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Gurley Town filed its original complaint on July 29, 2020. *See Town of Cleveland, Alabama et al. v. Gurley Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

1685. Town of Cleveland, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45217-DAP: Plaintiff Priceville Town, Alabama

Priceville Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Priceville Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Priceville Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Priceville Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Priceville Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Priceville Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Priceville Town filed its original complaint on July 29, 2020. *See Town of Cleveland, Alabama et al. v. Litigating Priceville Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Priceville Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Priceville Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Priceville Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Priceville Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Priceville Town’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Priceville Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Priceville Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Priceville Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Priceville Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Priceville Town’s potential claims against them. Priceville Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Priceville Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Priceville Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Priceville Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Priceville Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on July 29, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Priceville Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1686. City of Killen, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45218-DAP: Plaintiff Killen Town, Alabama

Killen Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Killen Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Killen Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Killen Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Killen Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Killen Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Killen Town filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on July 30, 2020. See City of Killen, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45218-DAP, ECF No. 1. Killen Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Killen Town elected not to do so. Killen Town waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Killen Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Killen Town's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Killen Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Killen Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Killen Town filed its original complaint on July 30, 2020. See City of Killen, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45218-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Killen Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Killen Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Killen Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—nearly four years after filing its original complaint on July 30, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." 1687. Ard v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45220-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Livingston Parish, Louisiana

Sheriff of Livingston Parish's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Livingston Parish failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Livingston Parish also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Livingston Parish's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Livingston Parish does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Livingston Parish was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Livingston Parish filed its original complaint on June 11, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 5, 2020. See Ard v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45220-DAP, ECF No. 11. Sheriff of Livingston Parish could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Livingston Parish elected not to do so. Instead, Sheriff of Livingston Parish waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Livingston Parish's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sheriff of Livingston Parish's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.003% market share for Livingston Parish). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Livingston Parish to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Sheriff of Livingston Parish's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.16% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Livingston Parish to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Livingston Parish filed its original complaint on June 11, 2020. See Ard v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45220-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Livingston Parish never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Sheriff of Livingston Parish's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Livingston Parish's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Livingston Parish's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Livingston Parish therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Louisiana law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Livingston Parish's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Louisiana law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Livingston Parish, a municipality in Louisiana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Sheriff of Livingston Parish seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Livingston Parish v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, Ltd., et al., No. 1:19-op-46140-DAP; and Ard v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45220-DAP. Sheriff of Livingston Parish's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheriff of Livingston Parish's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sheriff of Livingston Parish filed its original complaint on June 11, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Ard v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45220-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Sheriff of Livingston Parish first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on June 11, 2024. Sheriff of Livingston Parish's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sheriff of Livingston Parish's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Louisiana, public-nuisance claims are subject to an one-year limitations period. Sheriff of Livingston Parish's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Sheriff of Livingston Parish sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on June 11, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Livingston Parish, a municipality in Louisiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1688. City of Daphne, Alabama v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals, LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45227-DAP: Plaintiff Daphne City, Alabama

Daphne City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Daphne City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Daphne City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Daphne City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Daphne City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Daphne City filed its original complaint on February 21, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 7, 2020. See City of Daphne, Alabama v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals, LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45227-DAP, ECF No. 44. Daphne City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Daphne City elected not to do so. Instead, Daphne City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Daphne City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Daphne City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Daphne City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Daphne City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Daphne City filed its original complaint on February 21, 2020. See City of Daphne, Alabama v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals, LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45227-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Daphne City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF

Under this Court's orders, Daphne City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Daphne City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Daphne City's potential claims against them. Daphne City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Daphne City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Daphne City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Daphne City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Daphne City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is

1689. Wayne Farms, LLC v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45229-DAP: Plaintiff Wayne Farms, LLC, Oklahoma<sup>3</sup>

Wayne Farms, LLC’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wayne Farms, LLC failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wayne Farms, LLC also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wayne Farms, LLC's motion should be denied due to futility, as Wayne Farms, LLC does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

<sup>3</sup> While the PEC’s omnibus motions identify Wayne Farms, LLC as an Oklahoma plaintiff (see ECF No. 5546-1 at 120, 224; ECF No. 5565-1 at 124, 227), the allegations in Wayne Farms, LLC’s original complaint relate only to Georgia (see Wayne Farms, LLC v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45229-DAP, ECF No. 1). Additionally, the civil cover sheet filed with Wayne Farms, LLC’s original complaint identifies Wayne Farms, LLC as a resident of Hall County, Georgia. See Wayne Farms, LLC v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45229-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Accordingly, the PBMs treat Wayne Farms, LLC as a Georgia plaintiff notwithstanding the PEC’s representation. But even if Wayne Farms, LLC were an Oklahoma plaintiff, its untimely motion for leave to amend should still be denied for the same reasons explained below. The only argument raised that turns on Wayne Farms, LLC’s status as a Georgia or Oklahoma plaintiff relates to the impairment of the PBMs’ ability to exercise their rights under Georgia law to allocate fault to other parties given Wayne Farms, LLC’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint. But the PBMs have similar rights under Oklahoma law, so that argument applies with equal force if Wayne Farms, LLC is an Oklahoma plaintiff. See Section III.A.6, above. Additionally, if Wayne Farms, LLC is an Oklahoma plaintiff, then its request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Oklahoma. Oklahoma’s public nuisance law does not extend to “the manufacturing, marketing, and selling of prescription opioids.” Hunter, 499 P.3d at 730; see Section III.B.3, above.

Lack of Diligence. Wayne Farms, LLC was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wayne Farms, LLC filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on August 10, 2020. See Wayne Farms, LLC v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45229-DAP, ECF No. 1. Wayne Farms, LLC could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wayne Farms, LLC elected not to do so. Wayne Farms, LLC waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wayne Farms, LLC's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wayne Farms, LLC filed its original complaint on August 10, 2020. See Wayne Farms, LLC v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45229-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wayne Farms, LLC never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1

(Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Wayne Farms, LLC’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wayne Farms, LLC’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wayne Farms, LLC’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wayne Farms, LLC therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Wayne Farms, LLC has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Wayne Farms, LLC’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Wayne Farms, LLC’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wayne Farms, LLC’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wayne Farms, LLC, a third party payor in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wayne Farms, LLC, a third party payor in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1690. Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals, LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45231-DAP: Plaintiff Poarch Band of Creek Indians, Alabama

Poarch Band of Creek Indians's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Poarch Band of Creek Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Poarch Band of Creek Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Poarch Band of Creek Indians's motion should be denied due to futility, as Poarch Band of Creek Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Poarch Band of Creek Indians was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Poarch Band of Creek Indians filed its original complaint on April 3, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 13, 2020. See Poarch Band of Creek Indians v.

Amneal Pharmaceuticals, LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45231-DAP, ECF No. 43. Poarch Band of Creek Indians could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Poarch Band of Creek Indians elected not to do so. Instead, Poarch Band of Creek Indians waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Poarch Band of Creek Indians cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Poarch Band of Creek Indians, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Poarch Band of Creek Indians fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Poarch Band of Creek Indians's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.20% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Poarch Band of Creek Indians to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Poarch Band of Creek Indians filed its original complaint on April 3, 2020. See Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals, LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45231-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Poarch Band of Creek Indians never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Poarch Band of Creek Indians's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Poarch Band of Creek Indians's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Poarch Band of Creek Indians's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Poarch Band of Creek Indians therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Poarch Band of Creek Indians's

delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Poarch Band of Creek Indians, a native tribe in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Poarch Band of Creek Indians seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in four cases: Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals, LLC, et al., No. 1:20-op-45231-DAP; Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, No. 1:20-op-45285-DAP; Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. McKesson Corporation, et al., No. 1:20-op-45286-DAP; and Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Cardinal Health, Inc., No. 1:20-op-45294-DAP. Poarch Band of Creek Indians's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Poarch Band of Creek Indians's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Poarch Band of Creek Indians filed its original complaint on April 3, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals, LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45231-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Poarch Band of Creek Indians first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on April 3, 2024. Poarch Band of Creek Indians's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Poarch Band of Creek Indians's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Poarch Band of Creek Indians's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Poarch Band of Creek Indians sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on April 3, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Poarch Band of Creek Indians, a native tribe in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1691. Frederick County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45233-DAP: Plaintiff Frederick County, Virginia

Frederick County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Frederick County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Frederick County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Frederick County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Frederick County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Frederick County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on May 6, 2020. See Frederick County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45233-DAP, ECF No. 1-2 (bringing claims against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company; ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.; Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx Inc.). Frederick County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against other PBM-related entities in 2020, but elected not to do so. See Section II.A.1, above. Now, Frederick County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants nearly four years ago. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Frederick County's complaint, Frederick County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its original complaint against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A, above. Frederick County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Frederick County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.27% market share for Frederick County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Frederick County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Frederick County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Frederick County filed its original complaint on May 6, 2020, but waited until July 15, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—four years and two months later. See Frederick County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45233-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 15, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Frederick County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Frederick County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Frederick County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Frederick County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Frederick County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Frederick County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Frederick County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Frederick County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Frederick County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Frederick County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Frederick County’s potential claims against them. Frederick County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Frederick County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Frederick County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Frederick County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Frederick County filed its original complaint on May 6, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Frederick County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45233-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Frederick County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 6, 2024. Frederick County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Frederick County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Frederick County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1692. City of Lakeport et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45242-DAP: Plaintiff Lakeport City, California

Lakeport City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lakeport City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lakeport City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lakeport City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lakeport City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lakeport City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lakeport City amended its complaint on November 23, 2020, after transfer to the MDL on August 25, 2020. See City of Lakeport et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45242-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lakeport City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lakeport City’s deadline to amend was in 2020. Lakeport City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lakeport City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Lakeport City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Lakeport City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Lakeport City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Lakeport City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Lakeport City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lakeport City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Lakeport City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.31% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lakeport City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Lakeport City, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lakeport City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lakeport City filed its original complaint on June 16, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Lakeport et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45242-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lakeport City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Lakeport City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lakeport City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lakeport City, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1693. Municipality of Cidra, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45244-DAP: Plaintiff Municipality of Cidra, Puerto Rico

Municipality of Cidra’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Municipality of Cidra failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Municipality of Cidra also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Municipality of Cidra’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Municipality of Cidra does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Municipality of Cidra was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Municipality of Cidra filed its original complaint on June 23, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 1, 2020. See Municipality of Cidra, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45244-DAP, ECF No. 6. Municipality of Cidra could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Municipality of Cidra elected not to do so. Instead, Municipality of Cidra waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Municipality of Cidra’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Municipality of Cidra’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.30% market share for Municipality of Cidra). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Municipality of Cidra to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Municipality of Cidra's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.01% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Municipality of Cidra to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Municipality of Cidra filed its original complaint on June 23, 2020. See Municipality of Cidra, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45244-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Municipality of Cidra never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Municipality of Cidra's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Municipality of Cidra's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Municipality of Cidra's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Municipality of Cidra therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Municipality of Cidra, a municipality in Puerto Rico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Municipality of Cidra's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Municipality of Cidra filed its original complaint on June 23, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Municipality of Cidra, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45244-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Municipality of Cidra knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Municipality of Cidra's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Municipality of Cidra's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Municipality of Cidra, a municipality in Puerto Rico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1694. Municipality of Adjuntas, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45245-DAP: Plaintiff Municipality of Adjuntas, Puerto Rico

Municipality of Adjuntas's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Municipality of Adjuntas failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Municipality of Adjuntas also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Municipality of Adjuntas's motion should be denied due to futility, as Municipality of Adjuntas does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Municipality of Adjuntas was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Municipality of Adjuntas filed its original complaint on June 23, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 1, 2020. See Municipality of Adjuntas, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45245-DAP, ECF No. 6. Municipality of Adjuntas could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Municipality of Adjuntas elected not to do so. Instead, Municipality of Adjuntas waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Municipality of Adjuntas’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Municipality of Adjuntas’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Municipality of Adjuntas cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Municipality of Adjuntas’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Municipality of Adjuntas filed its original complaint on June 23, 2020. See Municipality of Adjuntas, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45245-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Municipality of Adjuntas never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Municipality of Adjuntas’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Municipality of Adjuntas’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Municipality of Adjuntas’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Municipality of Adjuntas therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Municipality of Adjuntas failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Municipality of Adjuntas’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Municipality of Adjuntas of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Municipality of Adjuntas refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Municipality of Adjuntas's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Municipality of Adjuntas's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Municipality of Adjuntas's potential claims against them. Municipality of Adjuntas's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Municipality of Adjuntas, a municipality in Puerto Rico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Municipality of Adjuntas's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Municipality of Adjuntas filed its original complaint on June 23, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Municipality of Adjuntas, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45245-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Municipality of Adjuntas knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, four years before seeking leave to amend. Municipality of Adjuntas's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Municipality of Adjuntas’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Municipality of Adjuntas, a municipality in Puerto Rico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1695. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45250-DAP: Plaintiff Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, Ohio

Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on September 18, 2020. See Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45250-DAP, ECF No. 1. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa elected not to do so. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on September 18, 2020. See Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45250-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, a native tribe in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa is a plaintiff in Ohio. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, a native tribe in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1696. City of Clearlake et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45251-DAP: Plaintiff Clearlake City, California

Clearlake City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Clearlake City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Clearlake City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Clearlake City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Clearlake City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Clearlake City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Clearlake City filed its original complaint on September 2, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 22, 2020. See City of Clearlake et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45251-DAP, ECF No. 5. Clearlake City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Clearlake City elected not to do so. Instead, Clearlake City waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Clearlake City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Clearlake City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Clearlake City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Clearlake City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Clearlake City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Clearlake City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Clearlake City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Clearlake City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.13% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Clearlake City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Clearlake City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Clearlake City filed its original complaint on September 2, 2020, but waited until September 24, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over four years later.

See City of Clearlake et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45251-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 24, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Clearlake City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Clearlake City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Clearlake City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Clearlake City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Clearlake City, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Clearlake City, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1697. City of Dublin et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45255-DAP: Plaintiff Dublin City, California

Dublin City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dublin City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dublin City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dublin City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Dublin City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dublin City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Dublin City filed its original complaint on May 26, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on October 6, 2020. See City of Dublin et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45255-DAP, ECF No. 31. Dublin City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Dublin City elected not to do so. Instead, Dublin City waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Dublin City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Dublin City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.26% market share for Dublin City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Dublin City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Dublin City, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Dublin City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Dublin City filed its original complaint on May 26, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Dublin et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45255-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Dublin City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 26, 2024. Dublin City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Dublin City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Dublin City, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1698. City of Dublin et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45255-DAP: Plaintiff Murrieta City, California

Murrieta City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Murrieta City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Murrieta City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Murrieta City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Murrieta City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Murrieta City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.15% market share for Murrieta City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Murrieta City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Murrieta City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.29% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Murrieta City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

1699. Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP: Plaintiff Attalla City, Alabama

Attalla City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Attalla City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Attalla City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Attalla City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Attalla City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Attalla City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Attalla City filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on October 20, 2020. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF No. 37. Attalla City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Attalla City elected not to do so. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Attalla City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Attalla City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Attalla City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Attalla City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.27% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Attalla City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Attalla City filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; 1-2; 1-3. Despite filing its case years ago, Attalla City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Attalla City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Attalla City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Attalla City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Attalla City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Attalla City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Attalla City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Attalla City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Attalla City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Attalla City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Attalla City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Attalla City's potential claims against them. Attalla City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Attalla City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Attalla City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Attalla City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Attalla City filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; 1-2; 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Attalla City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 13, 2024. Attalla City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Attalla City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Attalla City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Attalla City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on May 13, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Attalla City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1700. Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP: Plaintiff Camp Hill Town, Alabama

Camp Hill Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Camp Hill Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Camp Hill Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Camp Hill Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Camp Hill Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Camp Hill Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Camp Hill Town filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on October 20, 2020. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF No. 37. Camp Hill Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Camp Hill Town elected not to do so. Instead, Camp Hill Town waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Camp Hill Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Camp Hill Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Camp Hill Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Camp Hill Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Camp Hill Town filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; 1-2; 1-3. Despite filing its case years ago, Camp Hill Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Camp Hill Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Camp Hill Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Camp Hill Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Camp Hill Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Camp Hill Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Camp Hill Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Camp Hill Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Camp Hill Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Camp Hill Town's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Camp Hill Town's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Camp Hill Town's potential claims against them. Camp Hill Town's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Camp Hill Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Camp Hill Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Camp Hill Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Camp Hill Town filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; 1-2; 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Camp Hill Town first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 13, 2024. Camp Hill Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. Camp Hill Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Camp Hill Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Camp Hill Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on May 13, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Camp Hill Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1701. Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP: Plaintiff Cedar Bluff Town, Alabama

Cedar Bluff Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cedar Bluff Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cedar Bluff Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cedar Bluff Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Cedar Bluff Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1702. Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP: Plaintiff Centre City, Alabama

Centre City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Centre City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Centre City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Centre City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Centre City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Centre City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Centre City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Centre City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Centre City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.26% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Centre City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Centre City filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF Nos. 1-1; 1-2; 1-3. Despite filing its case years ago, Centre City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Centre City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Centre City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Centre City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Centre City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Centre City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Centre City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Centre City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Centre City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Centre City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Centre City's potential claims against them. Centre City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Centre City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Centre City filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF Nos. 1-1; 1-2; 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Centre City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 13, 2024. Centre City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Centre City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Centre City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Centre City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—four years after filing its original complaint on May 13, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Centre City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1703. Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP: Plaintiff Fultondale City, Alabama

Fultondale City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fultondale City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fultondale City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fultondale City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Fultondale City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fultondale City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Fultondale City filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on October 20, 2020. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF No. 37. Fultondale City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Fultondale City elected not to do so. Instead, Fultondale City waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Fultondale City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Fultondale City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.004% market share for Fultondale City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Fultondale City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Fultondale City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.05% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Fultondale City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Fultondale City filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case

No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF Nos. 1-1; 1-2; 1-3. Despite filing its case years ago, Fultondale City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Fultondale City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Fultondale City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Fultondale City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Fultondale City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Fultondale City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Fultondale City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Fultondale City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Fultondale City filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF Nos. 1-1; 1-2; 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Fultondale City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 13, 2024. Fultondale City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Fultondale City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. 1704. Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP: Plaintiff Graysville City, Alabama

Graysville City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Graysville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Graysville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Graysville City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Graysville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Graysville City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Graysville City filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on October 20, 2020. *See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Graysville City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Graysville City elected not to do so. Instead, Graysville City waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Graysville City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Graysville City's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl..

Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Graysville City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Graysville City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.10% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Graysville City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Graysville City filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020. See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals LLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45265-DAP, ECF Nos. 1-1; 1-2; 1-3. Despite filing its case years ago, Graysville City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). The PBMs are prejudiced by Graysville City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Graysville City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Graysville City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Graysville City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Graysville City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Graysville City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Graysville City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Graysville City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Graysville City’s potential claims against them. Graysville City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Graysville City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Graysville City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Graysville City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Graysville City filed its original complaint on May 13, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. *See Fultondale, Alabama, City of et al. v. Even assuming arguendo that Graysville City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 13, 2024. Graysville City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Graysville City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. 1705. Municipality of Barceloneta v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45267-DAP: Plaintiff Municipality of Barceloneta, Puerto Rico

Municipality of Barceloneta's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Municipality of Barceloneta failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Municipality of Barceloneta also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Municipality of Barceloneta's motion should be denied due to futility, as Municipality of Barceloneta does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Municipality of Barceloneta was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Municipality of Barceloneta amended its complaint on September 24, 2020, after transfer to the MDL on October 22, 2020. See Municipality of Barceloneta v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45267-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Municipality of Barceloneta declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Municipality of Barceloneta's deadline to amend was in 2020. Municipality of Barceloneta waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Municipality of Barceloneta's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Municipality of Barceloneta's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.01% market share). 1706. City of Muscle Shoals, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45268-DAP: Plaintiff Muscle Shoals City, Alabama

Muscle Shoals City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Muscle Shoals City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Muscle Shoals City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Muscle Shoals City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Muscle Shoals City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Muscle Shoals City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Muscle Shoals City filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on October 19, 2020. *See City of Muscle Shoals, Alabama v. (0.01% market share for Muscle Shoals City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Muscle Shoals City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Muscle Shoals City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.15% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Muscle Shoals City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Muscle Shoals City filed its original complaint on October 19, 2020. See City of Muscle Shoals, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45268-DAP, ECF No. 1. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Muscle Shoals City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Muscle Shoals City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Muscle Shoals City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—three and a half years after filing its original complaint on October 19, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Muscle Shoals City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1707. City of Northport, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45272-DAP: Plaintiff Brookwood Town, Alabama

Brookwood Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Brookwood Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Brookwood Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Brookwood Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Brookwood Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Brookwood Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Brookwood Town amended its complaint on January 28, 2021, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Northport, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45272-DAP, ECF No. 19. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Brookwood Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Brookwood Town's deadline to amend was in 2021. Brookwood Town waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Brookwood Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Brookwood Town's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.004% market share for Brookwood Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Brookwood Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Brookwood Town filed its original complaint on October 27, 2020. See City of Northport, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45272-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Brookwood Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Brookwood Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Brookwood Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Brookwood Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Brookwood Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Brookwood Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Brookwood Town’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Brookwood Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Brookwood Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Brookwood Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above.

Brookwood Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Brookwood Town’s potential claims against them. Brookwood Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Brookwood Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Brookwood Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Brookwood Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Brookwood Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—three and a half years after filing its original complaint on October 27, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Brookwood Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1708. City of Northport, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45272-DAP: Plaintiff Northport City, Alabama

Northport City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Northport City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Northport City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Northport City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Northport City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Northport City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Northport City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Northport City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Northport City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.45% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Northport City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Northport City filed its original complaint on October 27, 2020. See City of Northport, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45272-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Northport City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Northport City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Northport City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Northport City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1709. City of Northport, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45272-DAP: Plaintiff Robertsdale City, Alabama

Robertsdale City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Robertsdale City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Robertsdale City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Robertsdale City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Robertsdale City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Robertsdale City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Robertsdale City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.21% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Robertsdale City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Robertsdale City filed its original complaint on October 27, 2020. *See City of Northport, Alabama et al. v. 1710. Monroe County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45273-DAP: Plaintiff Monroe County, Alabama

Monroe County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Monroe County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Monroe County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Monroe County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Monroe County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al.*, Case No. 1:20-op-45273-DAP, ECF No. 1. Monroe County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Monroe County elected not to do so. Monroe County waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Monroe County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Monroe County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Monroe County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Monroe County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Monroe County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.22% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Monroe County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Monroe County filed its original complaint on October 30, 2020. See Monroe County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45273-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Monroe County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Monroe County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Monroe County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Monroe County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Monroe County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Monroe County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Monroe County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Monroe County's potential claims against them. Monroe County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Monroe County's delay in seeking

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Monroe County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Monroe County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1711. Monroe County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45273-DAP: Plaintiff Monroeville City, Alabama

Monroeville City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Monroeville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Monroeville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Monroeville City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Monroeville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

(0.002% market share for Monroeville City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Monroeville City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Monroeville City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.06% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Monroeville City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Monroeville City filed its original complaint on October 30, 2020. *See Monroe County, Alabama et al. v. Under this Court’s orders, Monroeville City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Monroeville City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Monroeville City’s potential claims against them. Monroeville City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Monroeville City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Monroeville City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Monroeville City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Monroeville City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—three and a half years after filing its original complaint on October 30, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Monroeville City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1712. Town of Millis, MA v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45275-DAP: Plaintiff Millis Town, Massachusetts

Millis Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Millis Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Millis Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Millis Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Millis Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Millis Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Millis Town amended its complaint on February 18, 2021, after transfer to the MDL on December 21, 2020. See Town of Millis, MA v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45275-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Millis Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Millis Town’s deadline to amend was in 2021. Millis Town waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Millis Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Millis Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Millis Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Millis Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Millis Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Millis Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Millis Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Millis Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Millis Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Millis Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Millis Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—three and a half years after filing its original complaint on December 3, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Millis Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1713. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners, Maryland

Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners elected not to do so. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners began receiving those services on January 1, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maryland law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maryland law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners, a school district in Maryland, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Maryland, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—three and a half years after filing its original complaint on December 16, 2020—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners, a school district in Maryland, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1714. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Bangor School Department, Maine

Board of Education of Bangor School Department’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Bangor School Department failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Bangor School Department also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Bangor School Department’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Bangor School Department does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Bangor School Department was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Bangor School Department violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Bangor School Department filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Bangor School Department’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Bangor School Department's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board of Education of Bangor School Department's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board of Education of Bangor School Department therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court's repeated instructions to the contrary, Board of Education of Bangor School Department has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Board of Education of Bangor School Department's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Bangor School Department's failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Bangor School Department is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Bangor School Department's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Bangor School Department, a school district in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1715. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District, Maine

Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. *See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District elected not to do so. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District’s potential claims against them. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District, a school district in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Board of Education of Cape Elizabeth School District’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. 1716. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131, Illinois

Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 elected not to do so. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131, a school district in Illinois, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131 seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of East Aurora, School District 131, a school district in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1717. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department, Maine

Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department elected not to do so. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department’s potential claims against them. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Cephalon, Inc., et al.*, No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Ellsworth School Department, a school district in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1718. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Joliet Public Schools, Illinois

Joliet Public Schools’ untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Joliet Public Schools failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Joliet Public Schools also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Joliet Public Schools’ motion should be denied due to futility, as Joliet Public Schools does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 elected not to do so. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's potential claims against them. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13, a school district in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13 is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 13, a school district in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 25's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 25 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 25 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 25's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 25 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 25 was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 25 filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. *See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 25 could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 25 elected not to do so. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 25 waited three years after its

Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 26's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 26 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 26 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 26's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 26 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 29 is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 29’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 29, a school district in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1724. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34, Maine

Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 elected not to do so. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34’s potential claims against them. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34, a school district in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34 is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 34’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. *E. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 40's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 40 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 40 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 40's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 40 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 57's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 57's potential claims against them. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 57's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 57's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 57, a school district in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 57 seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 57's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 57 is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 57's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 57, a school district in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1728. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60, Maine

Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 elected not to do so. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60 refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's potential claims against them. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 60, a school district in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 71's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 71 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 71 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 71's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine Regional School Unit 71 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15 violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15 filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15 therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See

Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15 failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15 of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15 refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15’s potential claims against them. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Maine

School Administrative District 15's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15, a school district in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15 seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15 is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 15, a school district in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1732. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35, Maine

Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35 was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35 filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35 could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35 elected not to do so. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35 waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 35 violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 44's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 44 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 44 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 44's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 44 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1735. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55, Maine

Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 elected not to do so. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v.

Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55's potential claims against them. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55, a school district in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55 is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 55, a school district in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1736. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6, Maine

Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6 was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6 elected not to do so. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6 waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6 violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6 filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. *See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. The PBMs notified Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6 of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6 refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al]”

with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6’s potential claims against them. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 6’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 61's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 61 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 61 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold,

Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 72’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine School

Administrative District 72 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 72 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 72's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 72 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 72, a school district in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 72 seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 72’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 72 is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 72’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 72, a school district in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1739. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District, Maine

Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District elected not to do so. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's potential claims against them. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District, a school district in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were "duplicative of and improperly split" from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 28/Five Town Central School District's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. *E. 1740. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 11, Maine

Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 11's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 11 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 11 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 11's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 11 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Maine School Administrative District 11 was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. But Board of Education of Portland School Department’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of Portland School Department, a school district in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Board of Education of Portland School Department seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of Portland School Department’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Portland School Department is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Portland School Department’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Portland School Department, a school district in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1743. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Rochester City School District, New York

Board of Education of Rochester City School District’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Rochester City School District failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Rochester City School District also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Rochester City School District’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Rochester City School District does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Rochester City School District was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Rochester City School District filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Board of Education of Rochester City School District could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Rochester City School District elected not to do so. Board of Education of Rochester City School District waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Rochester City School District's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Board of Education of Rochester City School District previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Board of Education of Rochester City School District of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Board of Education of Rochester City School District began receiving those services on July 2, 2007. See id. Inasmuch as Board of Education of Rochester City School District seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Board of Education of Rochester City School District knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Board of Education of Rochester City School District's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Rochester City School District violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Rochester City School District filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 10, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 10, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Rochester City School District's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Rochester City School District's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board of Education of Rochester City School District's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board of Education of Rochester City School District therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Rochester City School District’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of Rochester City School District, a school district in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Rochester City School District, a school district in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Board of Education of Rochester City School District's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1744. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Scarborough School Department, Maine

Board of Education of Scarborough School Department's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Scarborough School Department failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Scarborough School Department also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Scarborough School Department's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Scarborough School Department does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Scarborough School Department was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. elected not to do so. amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Board of Education of Scarborough School Department failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Board of Education of Scarborough School Department's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Board of Education of Scarborough School Department of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board of Education of Scarborough School Department refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Board of Education of Scarborough School Department's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Scarborough School Department's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Board of Education of Scarborough School Department's potential claims against them. Board of Education of Scarborough School Department's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Scarborough School Department's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to

Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District’s potential claims against them. Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District, a school district in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of St. George Municipal School District, a school district in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1747. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215, Illinois

Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215 was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215 filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215 could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215 elected not to do so. Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215 waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215 violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215 filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. *See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board of Education of Thornton Fractional Township High Schools, District 215 therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, a school district in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1749. Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Waterville School Department, Maine

Board of Education of Waterville School Department’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Waterville School Department failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Waterville School Department also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Waterville School Department’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Waterville School Department does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Waterville School Department was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Waterville School Department filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2020. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Board of Education of Waterville School Department could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board of Education of Waterville School Department elected not to do so. Board of Education of Waterville School Department waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board of Education of Waterville School Department’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board of Education of Waterville School Department violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board of Education of Waterville School Department filed its original complaint on December 16, 2020, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over three and a half years later. See Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205 et al. v. Cephalon,

Inc. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board of Education of Waterville School Department’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board of Education of Waterville School Department’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Board of Education of Waterville School Department failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Board of Education of Waterville School Department’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Board of Education of Waterville School Department of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board of Education of Waterville School Department refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Board of Education of Waterville School Department’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board of Education of Waterville School Department’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Board of Education of Waterville School Department’s potential claims against them. Board of Education of Waterville School Department's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board of Education of Waterville School Department's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Board of Education of Waterville School Department seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Board of Education of the City of Chicago, School District No. 299 et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-46042-DAP; and Board of Education of Thornton Township High Schools, District 205, et al. v. Cephalon, Inc., et al., No. 1:20-op-45281-DAP. Board of Education of Waterville School Department's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's

It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board of Education of Waterville School Department is a plaintiff in Maine. Board of Education of Waterville School Department's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board of Education of Waterville School Department, a school district in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1750. City of Auburn, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45282-DAP: Plaintiff Auburn City, Alabama

Auburn City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Auburn City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Auburn City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Auburn City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Auburn City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Auburn City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Auburn City amended its complaint on January 14, 2021, after transfer to the MDL on December 21, 2020. See City of Auburn, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45282-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Auburn City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Auburn City’s deadline to amend was in 2021. Auburn City waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Auburn City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Auburn City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Auburn City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Auburn City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Auburn City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.005% market share for Auburn City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Auburn City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Auburn City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.17% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Auburn City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Auburn City filed its original complaint on November 30, 2020. See City of Auburn, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45282-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Auburn City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Auburn City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Auburn City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Auburn City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Auburn City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Auburn City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Auburn City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Auburn City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1751. Lower Makefield Township v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45284-DAP: Plaintiff Lower Makefield Township, Pennsylvania

Lower Makefield Township's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lower Makefield Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lower Makefield Township also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lower Makefield Township's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lower Makefield Township does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lower Makefield Township was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lower Makefield Township filed its original complaint on June 19, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on December 21, 2020. See Lower Makefield Township v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45284-DAP, ECF No. 12. Lower Makefield Township could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lower Makefield Township elected not to do so. Instead, Lower Makefield Township waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lower Makefield Township's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Lower Makefield Township’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Lower Makefield Township cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lower Makefield Township filed its original complaint on June 19, 2020. See Lower Makefield Township v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45284-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Lower Makefield Township never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lower Makefield Township’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lower Makefield Township’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lower Makefield Township’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lower Makefield Township therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Lower Makefield Township failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Lower Makefield Township’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Lower Makefield Township of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Lower Makefield Township refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Lower Makefield Township’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lower Makefield Township’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Lower Makefield Township’s potential claims against them. Lower Makefield Township’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lower Makefield Township’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lower Makefield Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lower Makefield Township's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lower Makefield Township filed its original complaint on June 19, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Lower Makefield Township v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45284-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Lower Makefield Township first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on June 19, 2024. Lower Makefield Township's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lower Makefield Township's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lower Makefield Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1752. Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, Case No. 1:20-op-45285-DAP: Plaintiff Poarch Band of Creek Indians, Alabama

Poarch Band of Creek Indians's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Poarch Band of Creek Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Poarch Band of Creek Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15

or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Poarch Band of Creek Indians's motion should be denied due to futility, as Poarch Band of Creek Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Poarch Band of Creek Indians was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Poarch Band of Creek Indians filed its original complaint on August 5, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on December 21, 2020. See Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, Case No. 1:20-op-45285-DAP, ECF No. 15. Poarch Band of Creek Indians could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Poarch Band of Creek Indians elected not to do so. Instead, Poarch Band of Creek Indians waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Poarch Band of Creek Indians's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Poarch Band of Creek Indians cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Poarch Band of Creek Indians, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Poarch Band of Creek Indians fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.20% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Poarch Band of Creek Indians to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Poarch Band of Creek Indians filed its original complaint on August 5, 2020. See Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, Case No. 1:20-op-45285-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Poarch Band of Creek Indians never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Poarch Band of Creek Indians's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Poarch Band of Creek Indians therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Poarch Band of Creek Indians's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Poarch Band of Creek Indians, a native tribe in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Poarch Band of Creek Indians seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in four cases: Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals, LLC, et al., No. 1:20-op-45231-DAP; Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, No. 1:20-op-45285-DAP; Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. McKesson Corporation, et al., No. 1:20-op-45286-DAP; Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Cardinal Health, Inc., 1:20-op-45294-DAP. Poarch Band of Creek Indians's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–

63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

1753. Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45286-DAP: Plaintiff Poarch Band of Creek Indians, Alabama

Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Poarch Band of Creek Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Poarch Band of Creek Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s

1754. Dinwiddie County v. Mallinckrodt, PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45291-DAP: Plaintiff Dinwiddie County, Virginia

Dinwiddie County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dinwiddie County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dinwiddie County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dinwiddie County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Dinwiddie County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dinwiddie County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on April 4, 2019. See Dinwiddie County v. Mallinckrodt, PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45291-DAP, ECF No. 1-4; 1-5; 1-6 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Dinwiddie County also amended its complaint on August 5, 2020, to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 1-4; 1-5; 1-6 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Dinwiddie County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Dinwiddie County's deadline to amend was in 2021, but it waited three years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Dinwiddie County's complaint, Dinwiddie County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Dinwiddie County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Dinwiddie County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Dinwiddie County filed its original complaint on April 4, 2019, but waited until July 19, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over five years later. See Dinwiddie County v. Mallinckrodt, PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45291-DAP, ECF No. 1-4; 1-5;

1-6; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 19, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Dinwiddie County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Dinwiddie County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Dinwiddie County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Dinwiddie County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Dinwiddie County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Dinwiddie County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Dinwiddie County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Dinwiddie County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Dinwiddie County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Dinwiddie County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Dinwiddie County’s potential claims against them. Dinwiddie County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Dinwiddie County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Dinwiddie County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Dinwiddie County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Dinwiddie County filed its original complaint on April 4, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Dinwiddie County v. Mallinckrodt, PLC et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45291-DAP, ECF No. 1-4; 1-5; 1-6. Even assuming arguendo that Dinwiddie County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on April 4, 2023. Dinwiddie County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Dinwiddie County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Dinwiddie County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1755. Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Cardinal Health, Inc., Case No. 1:20-op-45294-DAP: Plaintiff Poarch Band of Creek Indians, Alabama

Poarch Band of Creek Indians's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Poarch Band of Creek Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Poarch Band of Creek Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Poarch Band of Creek Indians's motion should be denied due to futility, as Poarch Band of Creek Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Poarch Band of Creek Indians was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Poarch Band of Creek Indians filed its original complaint on August 4, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on December 28, 2020. See Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Cardinal Health, Inc., Case No. 1:20-op-45294-DAP, ECF No. 17. Poarch Band of Creek Indians could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Poarch Band of Creek Indians elected not to do so. Instead, Poarch Band of Creek Indians waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Poarch Band of Creek Indians's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.20% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Poarch Band of Creek Indians to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Poarch Band of Creek Indians filed its original complaint on August 4, 2020. See Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Cardinal Health, Inc., Case No. 1:20-op-45294-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Poarch Band of Creek Indians never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Poarch Band of Creek Indians therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Poarch Band of Creek Indians, a native tribe in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Poarch Band of Creek Indians seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in four cases: Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amneal Pharmaceuticals, LLC, et al., No. 1:20-op-45231-DAP; Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, No. 1:20-op-45285-DAP; Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. McKesson Corporation, et al., No. 1:20-op-45286-DAP; Poarch Band of Creek Indians v. Cardinal Health, Inc., 1:20-op-45294-DAP. Poarch Band of Creek Indians’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Poarch Band of Creek Indians, a native tribe in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1756. District Attorney of Clearfield County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45022-DAP: Plaintiff District Attorney of Clearfield County, Pennsylvania

District Attorney of Clearfield County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. District Attorney of Clearfield County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. District Attorney of Clearfield County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, District Attorney of Clearfield County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as District Attorney of Clearfield County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. District Attorney of Clearfield County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, District Attorney of Clearfield County filed its original complaint on August 21, 2020 and the case was transferred to the MDL on February 27, 2021. See District Attorney of Clearfield County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45022-DAP, ECF No. 14. District Attorney of Clearfield County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, District Attorney of Clearfield County elected not to do so. Instead, District Attorney of Clearfield County waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. District Attorney of Clearfield County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to District Attorney of Clearfield County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for District Attorney of Clearfield County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for District Attorney of Clearfield County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. District Attorney of Clearfield County filed its original complaint on August 21, 2020. See District Attorney of Clearfield County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45022-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, District Attorney of Clearfield County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating District Attorney of Clearfield County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of District Attorney of Clearfield County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by District Attorney of Clearfield County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and District Attorney of Clearfield County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, District Attorney of Clearfield County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to District Attorney of Clearfield County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified District Attorney of Clearfield County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but District Attorney of Clearfield County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, District Attorney of Clearfield County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above.

District Attorney of Clearfield County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against District Attorney of Clearfield County's potential claims against them. District Attorney of Clearfield County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But District Attorney of Clearfield County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. District Attorney of Clearfield County, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

1757. Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45025-DAP: Plaintiff Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund, Pennsylvania

Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund filed its original complaint on July 27, 2020, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. *See Sheet Metal Workers Local 19 Health Fund v. 1758. Middletown Township v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45030-DAP: Plaintiff Middletown Township, Pennsylvania

Middletown Township’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Middletown Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. 1759. Pennington County, South Dakota v. Mylan Pharmaceuticals, Inc. et al.,
Case No. 1:21-op-45048-DAP: Plaintiff Pennington County, South Dakota

Pennington County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pennington County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pennington County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pennington County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Pennington County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pennington County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pennington County filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on April 9, 2021. See Pennington County, South Dakota v. Mylan Pharmaceuticals, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45048-DAP, ECF No. 1. Pennington County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pennington County elected not to do so. Pennington County waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pennington County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Pennington County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Pennington County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pennington County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Pennington County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.13% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pennington County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Pennington County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Pennington County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Pennington County began receiving those services on September 1, 2010. See id. Inasmuch as Pennington County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Pennington County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Pennington County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Pennington County filed its original complaint on April 9, 2021. See Pennington County, South Dakota v. Mylan Pharmaceuticals, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45048-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Pennington County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Pennington County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Pennington County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Pennington County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Pennington County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Pennington County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Pennington County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Pennington County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Pennington County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Pennington County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Pennington County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Pennington County’s potential claims against them. Pennington County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under South Dakota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pennington County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under South Dakota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pennington County, a municipality in South Dakota, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pennington County, a municipality in South Dakota, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1760. City of Piedmont, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45049-DAP: Plaintiff Piedmont City, Alabama

Piedmont City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Piedmont City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Piedmont City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Piedmont City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Piedmont City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Piedmont City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Piedmont City amended its complaint on July 21, 2021, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Piedmont, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45049-DAP, ECF No. 18. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Piedmont City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Piedmont City’s deadline to amend was in 2021. Piedmont City waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Piedmont City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Piedmont City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Piedmont City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Piedmont City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Piedmont City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.41% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Piedmont City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Piedmont City filed its original complaint on April 12, 2021. See City of Piedmont, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45049-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Piedmont City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Piedmont City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Piedmont City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Piedmont City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Piedmont City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Piedmont City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Piedmont City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Piedmont City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Piedmont City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—three years after filing its original complaint on April 12, 2021—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Piedmont City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1761. Appanoose County et al. v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45051-DAP: Plaintiff Cerro Gordo County, Iowa

Cerro Gordo County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cerro Gordo County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cerro Gordo County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cerro Gordo County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Cerro Gordo County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cerro Gordo County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cerro Gordo County filed its original complaint on March 24, 2021 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 13, 2021. See Appanoose County et al. v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45051-DAP, ECF No. 6. Cerro Gordo County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cerro Gordo County elected not to do so. Instead, Cerro Gordo County waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cerro Gordo County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cerro Gordo County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Cerro Gordo County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.24% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cerro Gordo County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

1762. Appanoose County et al. v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45051-DAP: Plaintiff Chickasaw County, Iowa

Chickasaw County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chickasaw County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chickasaw County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chickasaw County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Chickasaw County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Chickasaw County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.15% market share). 1763. Appanoose County et al. v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45051-DAP: Plaintiff Emmet County, Iowa

Emmet County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Emmet County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Emmet County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Emmet County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Emmet County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Emmet County's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Emmet County cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Emmet County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.12% market share). OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Muscatine County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Muscatine County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Muscatine County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Muscatine County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.24% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Muscatine County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Iowa law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Muscatine County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Iowa law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Muscatine County, a municipality in Iowa, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Muscatine County, a municipality in Iowa, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1767. Appanoose County et al. v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45051-DAP: Plaintiff Osceola County, Iowa

Osceola County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Osceola County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Osceola County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Osceola County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Osceola County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Osceola County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Osceola County filed its original complaint on March 24, 2021 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 13, 2021. See Appanoose County et al. v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45051-DAP, ECF No. 6. Osceola County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Osceola County elected not to do so. Instead, Osceola County waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Osceola County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Osceola County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Osceola County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Osceola County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Osceola County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Osceola County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Osceola County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Osceola County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Osceola County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Osceola County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Osceola County’s potential claims against them. Osceola County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Iowa law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Osceola County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Iowa law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

1768. Appanoose County et al. v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45051-DAP: Plaintiff Poweshiek County, Iowa

Poweshiek County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Poweshiek County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Poweshiek County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Poweshiek County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Poweshiek County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1769. Appanoose County et al. v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45051-DAP: Plaintiff Wright County, Iowa

Wright County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wright County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wright County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wright County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Wright County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1770. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Luna v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45056-DAP: Plaintiff Luna County, New Mexico

Luna County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Luna County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Luna County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Luna County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Luna County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1771. Board of County Commissioners of The County of Union v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45057-DAP: Plaintiff Union County, New Mexico

Union County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Union County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Union County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Union County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Union County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Union County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.28% market share). 1772. City of Las Cruces, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45059-DAP: Plaintiff Las Cruces City, New Mexico

Las Cruces City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Las Cruces City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Las Cruces City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Las Cruces City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Las Cruces City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Las Cruces City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Las Cruces City amended its complaint on August 2, 2021, after transfer to the MDL on May 6, 2021. See City of Las Cruces, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45059-DAP, ECF No. 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Las Cruces City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Las Cruces City’s deadline to amend was in 2021. Las Cruces City waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Las Cruces City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Las Cruces City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Las Cruces City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Las Cruces City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Las Cruces City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Las Cruces City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Las Cruces City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Las Cruces City filed its original complaint on April 14, 2021. See City of Las Cruces, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45059-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Las Cruces City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Las Cruces City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Las Cruces City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Las Cruces City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Las Cruces City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Las Cruces City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Las Cruces City, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Las Cruces City, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1773. St. John's Riverside Hospital v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45063-DAP: Plaintiff St. John's Riverside Hospital, New York

St. John's Riverside Hospital's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. John's Riverside Hospital failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. John's Riverside Hospital also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. John's Riverside Hospital's motion should be denied due to futility, as St. John's Riverside Hospital does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm.

Lack of Diligence. St. John's Riverside Hospital was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, St. John's Riverside Hospital filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on May 8, 2021. See St. John's Riverside Hospital v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45063-DAP, ECF No. 1. St. John's Riverside Hospital could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, St. John's Riverside Hospital elected not to do so. St. John's Riverside Hospital waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. St. John's Riverside Hospital's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But St. John's Riverside Hospital's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. St. John's Riverside Hospital, a hospital in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. John's Riverside Hospital, a hospital in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. St. John's Riverside Hospital's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1774. Transitions Recovery Program v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45066-DAP: Plaintiff Transitions Recovery Program, Florida

Transitions Recovery Program's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Transitions Recovery Program failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Transitions Recovery Program also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Transitions Recovery Program's motion should be denied due to futility, as Transitions Recovery Program does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Transitions Recovery Program was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Transitions Recovery Program filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on May 19, 2021. See Transitions Recovery Program v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45066-DAP, ECF No. 1. Transitions Recovery Program could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Transitions Recovery Program elected not to do so. Transitions Recovery Program waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Transitions Recovery Program's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Transitions Recovery Program's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Transitions Recovery Program, a hospital in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Transitions Recovery Program, a hospital in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1775. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45067-DAP: Plaintiff Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund, New York

Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund's motion should be denied due to futility, as Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm.

Lack of Diligence. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on May 19, 2021. See Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45067-DAP, ECF No. 1. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund elected not to do so. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund began receiving those services on January 1, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund, a third party payor in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund, a third party payor in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Teamsters Local 456 Welfare Fund’s request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1776. City of Calera, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45070-DAP: Plaintiff Calera City, Alabama

Calera City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Calera City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Calera City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Calera City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Calera City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Calera City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Calera City filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on May 21, 2021. See City of Calera, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45070-DAP, ECF No. 1. Calera City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Calera City elected not to do so. Calera City waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Calera City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Calera City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Calera City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Calera City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Calera City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.22% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Calera City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Calera City filed its original complaint on May 21, 2021. See City of Calera, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Coropration et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45070-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Calera City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Calera City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Calera City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Calera City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Calera City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Calera City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Calera City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Calera City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1777. City of Gatlinburg, Tennessee v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45071-DAP: Plaintiff Gatlinburg City, Tennessee

Gatlinburg City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Gatlinburg City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Gatlinburg City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Gatlinburg City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Gatlinburg City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Gatlinburg City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Gatlinburg City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Gatlinburg City elected not to do so. Gatlinburg City waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Gatlinburg City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Gatlinburg City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Gatlinburg City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Gatlinburg City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Gatlinburg City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.16% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Gatlinburg City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Gatlinburg City filed its original complaint on May 21, 2021. See City of Gatlinburg, Tennessee v. Teva Pharmaceutical Industries, LTD et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45071-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Gatlinburg City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Gatlinburg City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Gatlinburg City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Gatlinburg City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Gatlinburg City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Gatlinburg City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Gatlinburg City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Gatlinburg City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Gatlinburg City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Gatlinburg City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Gatlinburg City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Gatlinburg City’s potential claims against them. Gatlinburg City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Tennessee law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Gatlinburg City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Tennessee law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Gatlinburg City, a municipality in Tennessee, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Gatlinburg City, a municipality in Tennessee, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1778. County Board of Arlington County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC, et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45078-DAP: Plaintiff Arlington County, Virginia

Arlington County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Arlington County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Arlington County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Arlington County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Arlington County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Arlington County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on April 1, 2019. See County Board of Arlington County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC, et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45078-DAP, ECF Nos. 1-3; 1-4 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Arlington County also amended its complaint on October 18, 2019, to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 1-3 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Arlington

County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Arlington County's deadline to amend was in 2021, but it waited nearly three years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Arlington County's complaint, Arlington County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Arlington County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Arlington County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.13% market share for Arlington County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Arlington County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Arlington County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Arlington County filed its original complaint on April 1, 2019, but waited until June 9, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—one year and two months later. See County Board of Arlington County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC, et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45078-DAP, ECF No. 1-3; 1-4; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: June 9, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Arlington County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Arlington County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Arlington County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Arlington County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Arlington County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Arlington County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Arlington County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Arlington County filed its original complaint on April 1, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See County Board of Arlington County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt PLC, et al., Case No.

1:21-op-45078-DAP, ECF No. 1-3; 1-4. Even assuming arguendo that Arlington County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on April 1, 2023. Arlington County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Arlington County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Arlington County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1779. City of Niceville Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45081-DAP: Plaintiff Niceville City, Florida

Niceville City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Niceville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Niceville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Niceville City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Niceville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Niceville City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Niceville City amended its complaint on September 13, 2021, after transfer to the MDL on June 14, 2021. See City of Niceville Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No.

1:21-op-45081-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Niceville City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Niceville City’s deadline to amend was in 2021. Niceville City waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Niceville City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Niceville City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Baron & Budd, P.C.; and Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Niceville City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Niceville City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Niceville City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Niceville City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Niceville City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Niceville City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.31% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Niceville City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Niceville City filed its original complaint on May 14, 2021. See City of Niceville Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45081-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Niceville City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Niceville City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Niceville City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Niceville City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Niceville City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Niceville City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Niceville City, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Niceville City, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1780. Russell, KY et al. v. Abbott Laboratories et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45094-DAP: Plaintiff Russell City, Kentucky

Russell City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Russell City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Russell City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Russell City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Russell City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Russell City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Russell City filed its original complaint on June 25, 2021 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 11, 2021. See Russell, KY et al. v. Abbott Laboratories et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45094-DAP, ECF No. 18. Russell City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2021. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Russell City elected not to do so. Instead, Russell City waited three years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Russell City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Russell City filed its original complaint on June 25, 2021. See Russell, KY et al. v. Abbott Laboratories et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45094-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Russell City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Russell City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Russell City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Russell City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Russell City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Russell City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Russell City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Russell City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Russell City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Russell City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Russell City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Russell City’s potential claims against them. Russell City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kentucky law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Russell City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kentucky law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Russell City, a municipality in Kentucky, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Russell City, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1781. Village of Lexington v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45109-DAP: Plaintiff Lexington Village, Ohio

Lexington Village's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lexington Village failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lexington Village also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lexington Village's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lexington Village does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lexington Village was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lexington Village filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on November 5, 2021. See Village of Lexington v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45109-DAP, ECF No. 1. Lexington Village could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lexington Village elected not to do so. Lexington Village waited more than two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lexington Village’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Lexington Village’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Lexington Village cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lexington Village filed its original complaint on November 5, 2021. See Village of Lexington v. Actavis LLC et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45109-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lexington Village never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lexington Village’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lexington Village’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lexington Village's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lexington Village therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Lexington Village failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Lexington Village's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Lexington Village of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Lexington Village refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Lexington Village's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lexington Village's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Lexington Village's potential claims against them. Lexington Village's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lexington Village's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lexington Village, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Lexington Village is a plaintiff in Ohio. Lexington Village's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lexington Village, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1782. Threadgill v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45118-DAP: Plaintiff Shannon Lee Threadgill, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child K.R.T., Washington

Shannon Lee Threadgill's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Threadgill failed to provide notice of her proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Threadgill also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because her untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Threadgill's motion should be denied due to futility, as Threadgill does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to her alleged harm, her proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and she lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Threadgill was on notice of her claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Threadgill filed her original complaint directly into the MDL on December 15, 2021. See Threadgill v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45118-DAP, ECF No. 1. Threadgill could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Threadgill elected not to do so. Threadgill waited more than two years after her deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Threadgill’s lack of diligence in pursuing her claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Threadgill filed her original complaint on December 15, 2021. See Threadgill v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45118-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing her case years ago, Threadgill never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Threadgill’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Threadgill’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Threadgill’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Threadgill therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend her complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Threadgill’s delay in seeking to amend her complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Threadgill, an individual in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to her injuries. Instead, she relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Threadgill’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Threadgill sought leave to amend her complaint on July 29, 2024—two and a half years after filing her original complaint on December 15, 2021—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Threadgill, an individual in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1783. Vincent v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45119-DAP: Plaintiff Beth Vincent, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child S.J.S, Kentucky

Vincent’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Vincent failed to provide notice of her proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Vincent also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because her untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Vincent’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Vincent does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to her alleged harm, and she lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1784. Rubin v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45121-DAP: Plaintiff Adam Matthew Rubin, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child C.A.R., New York

Adam Matthew Rubin, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child C.A.R.’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rubin failed to provide notice of his proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rubin also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because his untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rubin’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Rubin does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to his alleged harm.

Lack of Diligence. Rubin was on notice of his claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rubin filed his original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2021. See Rubin v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45121-DAP, ECF No. 1. Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Rubin filed his original complaint on December 16, 2021. See Rubin v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45121-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing his case years ago, Rubin never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Instead, he relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Rubin, an individual in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because he is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Rubin’s request for leave to amend his complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1785. Rubin v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45122-DAP: Plaintiff Adam Matthew Rubin, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child C.M.R., New York

Adam Matthew Rubin, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child C.M.R.’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rubin failed to provide notice of his proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rubin also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because his untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rubin’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Rubin does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to his alleged harm.

Failure to State a Claim. Rubin, an individual in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to his injuries. Instead, he relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Rubin, an individual in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because he is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Rubin’s request for leave to amend his complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1786. Rubin v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45123-DAP: Plaintiff Adam Matthew Rubin, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child C.J.R., New York

Adam Matthew Rubin, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child C.J.R.’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rubin failed to provide notice of his proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rubin also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because his untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rubin’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Rubin does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm.

Lack of Diligence. Rubin was on notice of his claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rubin filed his original complaint directly into the MDL on December 16, 2021. See Rubin v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45123-DAP, ECF No. 1. Rubin could have amended his complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Rubin elected not to do so. Rubin waited more than two years after his deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Rubin’s lack of diligence in pursuing his claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Rubin filed his original complaint on December 16, 2021. See Rubin v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45123-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing his case years ago, Rubin never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Rubin’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Rubin’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Rubin’s disregard for his most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Rubin therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend his complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Rubin’s delay in seeking to amend his complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Rubin, an individual in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to his injuries. Instead, he relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Rubin, an individual in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because he is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Rubin’s request for leave to amend his complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1787. Farrell v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45124-DAP: Plaintiff Maryann Farrell, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child A.N.F., Pennsylvania

Maryann Farrell, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child A.N.F.’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Farrell failed to provide notice of her proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Farrell also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because her untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Farrell’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Farrell does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to her alleged harm, and she lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

diligence in pursuing her claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. 1788. Funston v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45125-DAP: Plaintiff Christopher Michael Funston, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child C.C.F., Missouri

Calkins could have amended her complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Calkins elected not to do so. Calkins waited more than two years after her deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Calkins's lack of diligence in pursuing her claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Calkins filed her original complaint on December 17, 2021. See Calkins v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45130-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing her case years ago, Calkins never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Calkins's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Calkins's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Calkins's disregard for her most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Calkins therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend her complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Calkins's delay in seeking to amend her complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Calkins, an individual in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to her injuries. Instead, she relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Calkins, an individual in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1794. Carpenter v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45131-DAP: Plaintiff Holly Janelle Carpenter, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child C.M.C., Maryland

Holly Janelle Carpenter, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child C.M.C.'s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Carpenter failed to provide notice of her proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Carpenter also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because her untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Carpenter's motion should be denied due to futility, as Carpenter does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to her alleged harm, and she lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Carpenter was on notice of her claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Carpenter filed her original complaint directly into the MDL on December 17, 2021. See Carpenter v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45131-DAP, ECF No. 1. Carpenter could have amended her complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Carpenter elected not to do so. Carpenter waited more than two years after her deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Carpenter’s lack of diligence in pursuing her claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

1795. Chapman v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45132-DAP: Plaintiff Thomas Wayne Chapman, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child V.D.C., Alabama

Thomas Wayne Chapman, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child V.D.C.'s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chapman failed to provide notice of her proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chapman also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because her untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chapman's motion should be denied due to futility, as Chapman does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to her alleged harm, her proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and she lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chapman was on notice of her claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Chapman filed her original complaint directly into the MDL on December 17, 2021. See Chapman v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45132-DAP, ECF No. 1. Instead, she relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Chapman’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Chapman sought leave to amend her complaint on July 29, 2024—two and a half years after filing her original complaint on December 17, 2021—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chapman, an individual in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1796. Covington v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45133-DAP: Plaintiff Regina Marie Covington, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child K.W.C.C., Missouri

Regina Marie Covington, individually and as next of friend and guardian of Child K.W.C.C.'s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. 1797. Creech v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:21-op-45134-DAP: Plaintiff Christopher Creech, individually and as next friend and guardian of Child L.R.C., New Mexico

Christopher Creech, individually and as next friend and guardian of Child L.R.C.’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Creech failed to provide notice of his proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Creech also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because his untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Creech’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Creech does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to his alleged harm, and he lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1798. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Torrance v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45004-DAP: Plaintiff Torrance County, New Mexico

Torrance County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Torrance County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Torrance County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Torrance County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Torrance County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Torrance County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Torrance County filed its original complaint on December 30, 2021 and the case was transferred to the MDL on January 28, 2022. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Torrance v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45004-DAP, ECF No. 4. Torrance County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Torrance County elected not to do so. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Torrance County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1799. County of Coryell v. Walgreens Co. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45009-DAP: Plaintiff Coryell County, Texas

Coryell County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Coryell County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Coryell County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Coryell County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Coryell County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Coryell County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Coryell County first amended its complaint on September 3, 2021. See County of Coryell v. Walgreens Co. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45009-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Coryell County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Coryell County’s deadline to amend was in 2022. Coryell County waited more than two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Coryell County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Coryell County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Coryell County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Coryell County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Coryell County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.41% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Coryell County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Coryell County filed its original complaint on March 30, 2018. See County of Coryell v. Walgreens Co. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45009-DAP, ECF No. 7-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Coryell County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Coryell County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Coryell County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Coryell County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Coryell County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Coryell County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Coryell County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Coryell County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Coryell County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Coryell County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Coryell County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Coryell County’s potential claims against them. Coryell County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Texas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Coryell County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Texas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Coryell County, a municipality in Texas, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Coryell County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Coryell County filed its original complaint on March 30, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See County of Coryell v. Walgreens Co. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45009-DAP, ECF No. 7-2. Even assuming arguendo that Coryell County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on March 30, 2022. Coryell County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Coryell County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Coryell County, a municipality in Texas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1800. County of Kendall v. Walgreens Co. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45010-DAP: Plaintiff Kendall County, Texas

Kendall County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kendall County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kendall County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kendall County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Kendall County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Kendall County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Kendall County first amended its complaint on September 3, 2021. See County of Kendall v. Walgreens Co. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45010-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Kendall County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Kendall County’s deadline to amend was in 2022. Kendall County waited more than two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Kendall County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Kendall County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.23% market share for Kendall County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kendall County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Kendall County filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018. See County of Kendall v. Walgreens Co. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45010-DAP, ECF No. 7-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Kendall County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Kendall County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Kendall County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Kendall County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Kendall County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Kendall County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Kendall County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Kendall County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Kendall County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Kendall County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Kendall County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Kendall County’s potential claims against them. Kendall County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Texas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Kendall County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Texas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Kendall County, a municipality in Texas, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Kendall County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Kendall County filed its original complaint on May 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See County of Kendall v. Walgreens Co. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45010-DAP, ECF No. 7-2. Even assuming arguendo that Kendall County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 16, 2022. Kendall County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Kendall County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Kendall County, a municipality in Texas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1801. Eddy County v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45015-DAP: Plaintiff Eddy County, New Mexico

Eddy County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Eddy County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Eddy County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Eddy County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Eddy County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Eddy County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Eddy County filed its original complaint on February 24, 2022 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 24, 2022. See Eddy County v. Allergan PLC et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45015-DAP, ECF No. 4. Eddy County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Eddy County elected not to do so. Instead, Eddy County waited more than two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Eddy County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Eddy County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Eddy County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Eddy County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Eddy County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.49% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Eddy County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Eddy County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Eddy County, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Eddy County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1802. City of Columbiana, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45016-DAP: Plaintiff Columbiana City, Alabama

Columbiana City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Columbiana City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Columbiana City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Columbiana City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Columbiana City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Columbiana City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Columbiana City amended its complaint on March 3, 2023, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Columbiana, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45016-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Columbiana City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Columbiana City’s deadline to amend was in 2022. Columbiana City waited more than two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Columbiana City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Columbiana City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Columbiana City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Columbiana City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Decl., Exhibit C (0.22% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Columbiana City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Columbiana City filed its original complaint on March 1, 2022. See City of Columbiana, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45016-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Columbiana City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Columbiana City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Columbiana City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Columbiana City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Columbiana City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Columbiana City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Columbiana City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Columbiana City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Columbiana City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Columbiana City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Columbiana City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Columbiana City's potential claims against them. Columbiana City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Columbiana City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Columbiana City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Columbiana City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—two years after filing its original complaint on March 1, 2022—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Columbiana City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1803. City of Columbiana, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45016-DAP: Plaintiff Helena City, Alabama

Helena City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Helena City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Helena City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Helena City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Helena City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Helena City waited more than two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Helena City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Helena City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Helena City filed its original complaint on March 1, 2022. *See City of Columbiana, Alabama et al. v. Under this Court's orders, Helena City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. 1804. City of Columbiana, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45016-DAP: Plaintiff Pelham City, Alabama

Pelham City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pelham City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pelham City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pelham City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Pelham City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pelham City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Pelham City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.22% market share). 1805. City of Bay Minette, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45018-DAP: Plaintiff Bay Minette City, Alabama

Bay Minette City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bay Minette City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bay Minette City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bay Minette City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Bay Minette City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bay Minette City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bay Minette City amended its complaint on May 9, 2022, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Bay Minette, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45018-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bay Minette City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Bay Minette City’s deadline to amend was in 2022. Bay Minette City waited more than two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bay Minette City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Bay Minette City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Bay Minette City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bay Minette City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Bay Minette City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.25% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bay Minette City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Bay Minette City filed its original complaint on March 22, 2022. See City of Bay Minette, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45018-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Bay Minette City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Bay Minette City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Bay Minette City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Bay Minette City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Bay Minette City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bay Minette City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bay Minette City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Bay Minette City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Bay Minette City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—two years after filing its original complaint on March 22, 2022—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bay Minette City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1806. City of Bay Minette, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45018-DAP: Plaintiff Loxley Town, Alabama

Loxley Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Loxley Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Loxley Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Loxley Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Loxley Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Loxley Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Loxley Town amended its complaint on May 9, 2022, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Bay Minette, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45018-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Loxley Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Loxley Town’s deadline to amend was in 2022. Loxley Town waited more than two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Loxley Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Loxley Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Loxley Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Loxley Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Loxley Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.31% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Loxley Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Loxley Town filed its original complaint on March 22, 2022. See City of Bay Minette, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45018-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Loxley Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Loxley Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Loxley Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Loxley Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Loxley Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Loxley Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Loxley Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Loxley Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Loxley Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—two years after filing its original complaint on March 22, 2022—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Loxley Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1807. City of Bay Minette, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45018-DAP: Plaintiff Summerdale Town, Alabama

Summerdale Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Summerdale Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Summerdale Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Summerdale Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Summerdale Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Summerdale Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Summerdale Town waited more than two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Summerdale Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Summerdale Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Summerdale Town filed its original complaint on March 22, 2022. See City of Bay Minette, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45018-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Summerdale Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). 1808. City of Gulf Shores, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45019-DAP: Plaintiff Gulf Shores City, Alabama

Gulf Shores City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Gulf Shores City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Gulf Shores City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Gulf Shores City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Gulf Shores City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Gulf Shores City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Gulf Shores City filed its original complaint on March 4, 2022 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 23, 2022. See City of Gulf Shores, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45019-DAP, ECF No. 3. Gulf Shores City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Gulf Shores City elected not to do so. Instead, Gulf Shores City waited more than two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Gulf Shores City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Gulf Shores City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Gulf Shores City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Gulf Shores City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Gulf Shores City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.47% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Gulf Shores City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Gulf Shores City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Gulf Shores City filed its original complaint on March 4, 2022, but waited until July 15, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than two years later. See City of Gulf Shores, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45019-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 15, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Gulf Shores City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Gulf Shores City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Gulf Shores City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Gulf Shores City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Gulf Shores City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Gulf Shores City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—two years after filing its original complaint on March 4, 2022—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Gulf Shores City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1809. City of Childersburg, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45020-DAP: Plaintiff Childersburg City, Alabama

Childersburg City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Childersburg City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Childersburg City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Childersburg City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Childersburg City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Childersburg City’s deadline to amend was in 2022. Childersburg City waited two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Childersburg City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Childersburg City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Childersburg City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Childersburg City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Childersburg City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.23% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Childersburg City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Childersburg City filed its original complaint on April 8, 2022. See City of Childersburg, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45020-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Childersburg City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Childersburg City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Childersburg City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Childersburg City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Childersburg City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Childersburg City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Childersburg City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Childersburg City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Childersburg City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—two years after filing its original complaint on April 8, 2022—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Childersburg City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1810. Board of Education of Boardman Local Schools et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45023-DAP: Plaintiff Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools, Ohio

Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on May 19, 2022. See Board of Education of Boardman Local Schools et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45023-DAP, ECF No. 1. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools elected not to do so. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools waited nearly two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools filed its original complaint on May 19, 2022, but waited until September 13, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than two years later. See Board of Education of Boardman Local Schools et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45023-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 13, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools's potential claims against them. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools, a school district in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools is a plaintiff in Ohio. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Board Of Education of Boardman Local Schools, a school district in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1811. Board of Education of Boardman Local Schools et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45023-DAP: Plaintiff Board of Education of Liberty Local Schools, Ohio

Board of Education of Liberty Local Schools's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Board of Education of Liberty Local Schools failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Board of Education of Liberty Local Schools also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Board of Education of Liberty Local Schools's motion should be denied due to futility, as Board of Education of Liberty Local Schools does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Board of Education of Liberty Local Schools was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Board of Education of Liberty Local Schools filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on May 19, 2022. *See Board of Education of Boardman Local Schools et al. v. 1812. MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45057-DAP: Plaintiff MSPA Claims 1, LLC, Ohio

MSPA Claims 1, LLC’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. MSPA Claims 1, LLC failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. MSPA Claims 1, LLC also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, MSPA Claims 1, LLC’s motion should be denied due to futility, as MSPA Claims 1, LLC does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. MSPA Claims 1, LLC was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, MSPA Claims 1, LLC filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on January 17, 2018. See MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45057-DAP, ECF No. 1. MSPA Claims 1, LLC could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, MSPA Claims 1, LLC elected not to do so. MSPA Claims 1, LLC waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. MSPA Claims 1, LLC's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. MSPA Claims 1, LLC filed its original complaint on January 17, 2018. See MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45057-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, MSPA Claims 1, LLC never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating MSPA Claims 1, LLC's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of MSPA Claims 1, LLC's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by MSPA Claims 1, LLC's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and MSPA Claims 1, LLC therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But MSPA Claims 1, LLC's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. MSPA Claims 1, LLC, a third-party payer in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. MSPA Claims 1, LLC seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: MSPA Claims 1, LLC, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:18- OP-45057-DAP; and MSPA Claims 1, LLC, et al. v. Ando, Inc., et al., No. 1:18-OP-45526-DAP. MSPA Claims 1, LLC's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. MSPA Claims 1, LLC is a plaintiff in Ohio. MSPA Claims 1, LLC's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for MSPA Claims 1, LLC's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. MSPA Claims 1, LLC filed its original complaint on January 17, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45057-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that MSPA Claims 1, LLC knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. MSPA Claims 1, LLC's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. MSPA Claims 1, LLC's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. MSPA Claims 1, LLC, a third-party payer in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1813. MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45057-DAP: Plaintiff MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC, Ohio

MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC's motion should be denied due to futility, as MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Litigating MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC, a third-party payer in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: MSPA Claims 1, LLC, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:18- OP-45057-DAP; and MSPA Claims 1, LLC, et al. v. Anda, Inc., et al., No. 1:18- OP-45526-DAP. MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC is a plaintiff in Ohio. MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC filed its original complaint on January 17, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45057-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC, a third-party payer in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1815. MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Anda, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP: Plaintiff MSPA Claims 1, LLC, Florida

MSPA Claims 1, LLC's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. MSPA Claims 1, LLC failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. MSPA Claims 1, LLC also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, MSPA Claims 1, LLC's motion should be denied due to futility, as MSPA Claims 1, LLC does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. MSPA Claims 1, LLC was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, MSPA Claims 1, LLC filed its original complaint on February 16, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on May 7, 2018. See MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Anda, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP, ECF No. 24. MSPA Claims 1, LLC could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, MSPA Claims 1, LLC elected not to do so. Instead, MSPA Claims 1, LLC waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. MSPA Claims 1, LLC's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Claims Dismissed with Prejudice. This Court previously dismissed with prejudice "[a]ll claims in this case" brought by assignees of six third party payor assignors. Sept. 22, 2023 Order, MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Anda, Inc., et al., No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP. MSPA Claims 1, LLC cannot amend its complaint to reassert claims that were dismissed with prejudice and leave to amend should be denied. See Gale, 142 F. Supp. 3d at 554–55 ("[A] stipulated dismissal with prejudice constitutes an adjudication on the merits" and denying motion for leave to amend complaint when “[p]laintiffs fail to allege any claim within this Court’s federal question jurisdiction that would not be barred by res judicata.”).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. MSPA Claims 1, LLC filed its original complaint on February 16, 2018. See MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Anda, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, MSPA Claims 1, LLC never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating MSPA Claims 1, LLC’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of MSPA Claims 1, LLC’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by MSPA Claims 1, LLC’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and MSPA Claims 1, LLC therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But MSPA Claims 1, LLC’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. MSPA Claims 1, LLC, a third-party payer in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. MSPA Claims 1, LLC seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: MSPA Claims 1, LLC, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:18-op-45057-DAP; and MSPA Claims 1, LLC, et al. v. Andia, Inc., et al., No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP. MSPA Claims 1, LLC’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for MSPA Claims 1, LLC’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. MSPA Claims 1, LLC filed its original complaint on February 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. MSPA Claims 1, LLC’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because MSPA Claims 1, LLC sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on February 16, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. MSPA Claims 1, LLC, a third-party payer in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1816. MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Anda, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP: Plaintiff MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC, Florida

MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC’s motion should be denied due to futility, as MAO-MSO Recovery II, LLC does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1817. MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Anda, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP: Plaintiff MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC, Florida

MSP Recovery Claims, Series LLC's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. MSP Recovery Services LLC's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. MSP Recovery Services LLC failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. MSP Recovery Services LLC also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, MSP Recovery Services LLC's motion should be denied due to futility, as MSP Recovery Services LLC does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. MSP Recovery Services LLC was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, MSP Recovery Services LLC filed its original complaint on February 16, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on May 7, 2018. See MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Anda, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP, ECF No. 24. MSP Recovery Services LLC could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, MSP Recovery Services LLC elected not to do so. Instead, MSP Recovery Services LLC waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. MSP Recovery Services LLC’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Claims Dismissed with Prejudice. This Court previously dismissed with prejudice “[a]ll claims in this case” brought by assignees of six third party payor assignors. Sept. 22, 2023 Order, MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Anda, Inc., et al., No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP. MSP Recovery Services LLC cannot amend its complaint to reassert claims that were dismissed with prejudice and leave to amend should be denied. See Gale, 142 F. Supp. 3d at 554–55 (“[A] stipulated dismissal with prejudice constitutes an adjudication on the merits” and denying motion for leave to amend complaint when “[p]laintiffs fail to allege any claim within this Court’s federal question jurisdiction that would not be barred by res judicata.”).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. MSP Recovery Services LLC filed its original complaint on February 16, 2018. See MSPA Claims I, LLC et al. v. Anda, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, MSP Recovery Services LLC never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating MSP Recovery Services LLC's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of MSP Recovery Services LLC's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by MSP Recovery Services LLC's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and MSP Recovery Services LLC therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But MSP Recovery Services LLC's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. MSP Recovery Services LLC, a third-party payer in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries.

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Plaintiff is Not a Party. MSP Recovery Services LLC seeks leave to amend the complaint in MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Anda, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP, but MSP Recovery Services LLC is not a named plaintiff in that case. Because MSP Recovery Services LLC has not submitted any proposed complaint and is not a plaintiff in the existing case, MSP Recovery Services LLC has not pleaded any facts establishing injury to MSP Recovery Services LLC and its request for leave to amend should be denied as futile. See Stuebing Automatic Mach. Co., 2016 WL 7365093, at *2 (denying leave to amend where counterclaim plaintiff failed to set forth facts showing a cognizable injury).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for MSP Recovery Services LLC's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. MSP Recovery Services LLC filed its original complaint on February 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See MSPA Claims 1, LLC et al. v. Anda, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45526-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. It is therefore indisputable that MSP Recovery Services LLC knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. MSP Recovery Services LLC's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. MSP Recovery Services LLC's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. MSP Recovery Services LLC’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because MSP Recovery Services LLC sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on February 16, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. MSP Recovery Services LLC, a third-party payer in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1819. International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974 v. Purde Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45854-DAP: Plaintiff International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974, New York

International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974’s motion should be denied due to futility, as International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Purde Pharma L.P. et al.*, Case No. 1:19-op-45854-DAP, ECF No. 7. International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974 could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2020. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974 elected not to do so. Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974 filed its original complaint on September 13, 2019. *See International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974 v. RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974 filed its original complaint on September 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974 v. 1:19-op-45854-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974 knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost five years before seeking leave to amend. International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974, a third party payor in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. International Union of Painters and Allied Trades 1974's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1820. Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund et. al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et. al., Case No. 1:19-op-45899-DAP: Plaintiff Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund, New York

Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund's motion should be denied due to futility, as Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund began receiving those services on January 2, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund filed its original complaint on September 13, 2019. *See Building Trades Welfare Benefit Fund et. al. v. 1822. Putnam County School Board v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45025-DAP: Plaintiff Putnam County School Board, Florida

Putnam County School Board's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Putnam County School Board failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Putnam County School Board also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Putnam County School Board's motion should be denied due to futility, as Putnam County School Board does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Putnam County School Board was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Putnam County School Board filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on May 27, 2022. See Putnam County School Board v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45025-DAP, ECF No. 1. Putnam County School Board could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Putnam County School Board elected not to do so. Putnam County School Board waited nearly two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Putnam County School Board's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Putnam County School Board violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Putnam County School Board filed its original complaint on May 27, 2022, but waited until September 13, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than two years later. See Putnam County School Board v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45025-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 13, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Putnam County School Board's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Putnam County School Board's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Putnam County School Board's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Putnam County School Board therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Putnam County School Board failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Putnam County School Board's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Putnam County School Board of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Putnam County School Board refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Putnam County School Board's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Putnam County School Board's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Putnam County School Board's potential claims against them. Putnam County School Board's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Putnam County School Board's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Putnam County School Board, a school district in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries.

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above; Glenn, 642 F. Supp. 3d at 638.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Putnam County School Board, a school district in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1823. Hancock County Board of Education et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45027-DAP: Plaintiff Hamblen County Board of Education, Tennessee

Hamblen County Board of Education's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hamblen County Board of Education failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hamblen County Board of Education also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hamblen County Board of Education's motion should be denied due to futility, as Hamblen County Board of Education does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hamblen County Board of Education was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hamblen County Board of Education filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 27, 2022. See Hancock County Board of Education et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45027-DAP, ECF No. 1. Hamblen County Board of Education could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hamblen County Board of Education elected not to do so. Hamblen County Board of Education waited nearly two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hamblen County Board of Education’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Hamblen County Board of Education violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Hamblen County Board of Education filed its original complaint on June 27, 2022, but waited until September 10, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than two years later. See Hancock County Board of Education et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45027-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 10, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Hamblen County Board of Education’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Hamblen County Board of Education’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Hamblen County Board of Education’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Hamblen County Board of Education therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

of Education’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Hamblen County Board of Education of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Hamblen County Board of Education refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Hamblen County Board of Education’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[all] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Hamblen County Board of Education’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Hamblen County Board of Education’s potential claims against them. Hamblen County Board of Education’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Tennessee law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hamblen County Board of Education’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Tennessee law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Wyoming County Board of Education also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wyoming County Board of Education's motion should be denied due to futility, as Wyoming County Board of Education does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in West Virginia, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wyoming County Board of Education was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wyoming County Board of Education filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on July 1, 2022. See Marion County Board of Education et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45028-DAP, ECF No. 1. Wyoming County Board of Education could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2022. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wyoming County Board of Education elected not to do so. Wyoming County Board of Education waited nearly two years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wyoming County Board of Education's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under West Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wyoming County Board of Education's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under West Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wyoming County Board of Education, a school district in West Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Wyoming County Board of Education is a plaintiff in West Virginia. Wyoming County Board of Education's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because West Virginia's public nuisance law does not extend to "the sale, distribution, and manufacture of opioids." Huntington, 609 F. Supp. 3d at 475; see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wyoming County Board of Education, a school district in West Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1829. Susanville Elementary School District et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45031-DAP: Plaintiff Lassen County Office of Education, California

Lassen County Office of Education's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lassen County Office of Education failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lassen County Office of Education also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lassen County Office of Education's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lassen County Office of Education does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lassen County Office of Education was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lassen County Office of Education filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on October 4, 2022. See Susanville Elementary School District et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45031-DAP, ECF No. 1. Lassen County Office of Education could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2023. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lassen County Office of Education elected not to do so. Lassen County Office of Education waited a year and a half after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lassen County Office of Education’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Lassen County Office of Education violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Lassen County Office of Education filed its original complaint on October 4, 2022, but waited until September 9, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—nearly two years later. See Susanville Elementary School District et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45031-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 9, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lassen County Office of Education’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lassen County Office of Education’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lassen County Office of Education's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lassen County Office of Education therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Lassen County Office of Education, a school district in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. 1830. Susanville Elementary School District et al. v. Cephalon, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:22-op-45031-DAP: Plaintiff Susanville Elementary School District, California

Susanville Elementary School District's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Susanville Elementary School District failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Susanville Elementary School District also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Susanville Elementary School District's motion should be denied due to futility, as Susanville Elementary School District does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1831. Lee County, AL et al. v. Mylan Pharmaceuticals Inc. et al., Case No. 1:23-op-45010-DAP: Plaintiff Lee County, Alabama

Lee County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lee County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lee County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Lee County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Lee County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.33% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lee County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Lee County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Lee County filed its original complaint on November 8, 2023, but waited until July 15, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than eight months later. See Lee County, AL et al. v. Mylan Pharmaceuticals Inc. et al., Case No. 1:23-op-45010-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 15, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lee County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lee County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lee County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lee County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Lee County has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Lee County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lee County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lee County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lee County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lee County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lee County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1832. Lee County, AL et al. v. Mylan Pharmaceuticals Inc. et al., Case No. 1:23-op-45010-DAP: Plaintiff Winston County, Alabama

Winston County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Winston County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Winston County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Winston County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Winston County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Winston County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Winston County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Winston County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo

Decl., Exhibit C (0.22% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Winston County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Winston County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Winston County filed its original complaint on November 8, 2023, but waited until July 15, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than eight months later. *See Lee County, AL et al. v. This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Winston County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Winston County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Winston County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Winston County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1833. Cleveland County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45304-DAP: Plaintiff Cleveland County, North Carolina

Cleveland County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cleveland County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cleveland County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cleveland County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Cleveland County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cleveland County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cleveland County first amended its complaint on May 25, 2018. See Cleveland County

v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45304-DAP, ECF No. 5. Cleveland County amended its complaint again on March 15, 2019. See Cleveland County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45304-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cleveland County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Cleveland County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Cleveland County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cleveland County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Cleveland County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.09% market share for Cleveland County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cleveland County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Cleveland County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.38% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cleveland County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Cleveland County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Cleveland County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Cleveland County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Cleveland County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Cleveland County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Cleveland County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Cleveland County's potential claims against them. Cleveland County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Cleveland County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Cleveland County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Cleveland County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Cleveland County filed its second amended complaint on May 25, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Cleveland County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-45304-DAP, ECF No. 5. It is therefore indisputable that Cleveland County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Cleveland County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Cleveland County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Cleveland County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

CONCLUSION

The Moving Plaintiffs' omnibus motions for leave to amend fail to satisfy Rules 15 and 16 at every step. Allowing these proposed amendments would contravene the Rules of Civil Procedure, Sixth Circuit precedent, and this Court's own orders. The Court should deny the Moving Plaintiffs' omnibus motions for leave to amend.

Respectfully submitted this 16th day of January, 2025.
